J. M. CUNNINGHAM QUITS RACE FOR TREASURER

Popular Bellefonte Democrat Sees No Hope For Party Success.

GAME NOT WORTH IT

His Supporters Surprised by Withdrawal and Attribute it to Party Dissensions Since Chairman Kimport Deserted Regulars.

J. Mitchell Cunningham, of Bellefonte, has quit the race for the Democratic nomination for County Treasurer. Business requirements, coupled with the conviction that the "game wasn't worth the candle" prompted him to drop out of the contest. Underlying his retirement is the suspicion that he regards the Democratic party hopelessly divided as a result of County Chairman Kimport's course at Harrisburg and that the prospects for Democratic victory in November are slim at the best.

While Mr. Cunningham has made no formal announcement of his decision to withdraw, "The Republican" has it on unquestioned authority that such is the case. The official announcement of withdrawal will be made within the next few days. Mr. Cunningham was not in town yesterday. It is expected that he will on his return confirm the news of his retirement from the field.

The decision of Mr. Cunningham not to waste his time fighting for a nomination that gave little prospect of election was entirely unexpected and to the few Democrats who have learned of it came as a thunder-clap. Appreciating the causes underlying his action they fear that it is but the fore-runner of further and equally serious dissensions in the Democratic party in Centre County. He was regarded as one of the strongest aspirants for nomination on the Democratic ticket and his sudden and unlooked for retirement has caused hopeless confusion among these who have been informed of his unwillingness to continue as a candidate.

The retirement of Mr. Cunningham narrows the Democratic fight for the nomination for County Treasurer down to James Schofield, of Bellefonte, and John D. Miller, of Walker township. Frank W. Grebe, of Philipsburg, is also an aspirant, but the fight now is between Schofield and Miller. Cunningham's supporters are expected to turn in for Schofield, the bosses having decreed that Miller must not be nominated. The Democratic party having been split wide open, in Centre County as well as in the State at large, many Democrats are now insisting that both Schofield and Miller declare themselves in advance of the primaries whether they are for or against the reorganizers, for whom County Chairman Kimport voted at Harrisburg. The regular Democrats are taking the lead in the matter and will insist that every aspirant for a place on the Democratic ticket show his hand in advance of the primaries. Failure to do so will be regarded as cowardice and treated accordingly.

Murderer Arrested.

Peter Kufskie, wanted for the murder of Alonzo Smith, at Renovo, on July 18, was captured several nights ago while endeavoring to steal into his home under cover of darkness. He was removed to the Lock Haven jail to await trial. Kufskie killed Smith as a result of jealousy, a woman figuring in the case.

A Quiet Wedding.

William Murray Young, of Fillmore, and Hettie Augusta Laufer, of Benore, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock on July 12, at the Stormstown Methodist Episcopal parsonage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hugh Strain. We understand that the happy young couple will make their home at Altoona. The bride is a splendid young lady and is well qualified to preside over a home. The groom is an industrious young man and is popular with a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. Daniel Kline Dead.

Mrs. Daniel Kline died rather suddenly at her late home at Roopsburg at 11.30 o'clock, on Thursday night last. She was in the garden earlier in the day, when she was seized with a sinking spell. She failed to rally during the day and shortly before midnight passed away. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, interment being made in Meyer's cemetery. Deceased was aged about 56 years and is survived by a husband and four daughters and three sons. This is the first death in the family.

BUSINESS MEN'S PICNIC

Will be Held at Hecla Park, Tuesday, August 22 or 29; Officers Re-elected

Tuesday, August 22, or the following Tuesday, August 29, will be the date for the annual picnic of the business men of Centre and Clinton Counties, at Hecla Park, the exact date being left open temporarily to enable the Central Railroad Company of Pennsylvania to ascertain which will be more suitable in the matter of securing equipment to handle the crowd.

Plans for holding this years's picnic were discussed at a meeting of the business men's picnic association of the two counties, held on Tuesday afternoon at the New Commerical Hotel, in Lock Haven. Following the business meeting supper was served, the Centre Countians returning home on the evening train.

At the meeting were named the several committees to take charge of this year's outing. Several changes in the committees from last year were announced and appointments made to fill vacancies. Appropriate resolutions were adopted on the death of the late John I. Olewine and the late J. C. Meyer, both of whom were active members of the picnic association. The several committees named for the coming year follow:

Management J. W. Conley and G. W. Mason.

Finance—R. Hayes Steward, E. C. Tuten T. J. Smull, D. H. Stoner and A. C. Mingle.

Amusement—John D. Sourbeck, P. P. Rittman, Sidney Krumrine, David Chambers, Torrence Shearer, D. G. Stewart.

Music—John M. Bullock, D. I. McNaul and John R. Thompson.

Printing Hard P. Harris, W. Gross Mingle and A. C. Candor.

A new committee was formed to be known as the Initiation Committee and the president named Torrence Shearer, H. P. Harris, G. W. A. MacDonald, A. L. Merrill and R. S. Brouse as members.

The quota of members from Centre County being reduced within the past year by death and resignation, the following gentlemen were elected: R. S. Brouse, R. F. Hunter, John D. Miller and William Weber.

Postmaster Philip D. Foster, of State College, was re-elected president of the association. J. Will Conley, of Bellefonte, was elected secretary, vice J. C. Meyer, deceased.

Had Great War Record.

A soldier, pastor and missionary, Rev. Joseph Y. Burwell, born at Mt. Pleasant 80 years ago, died on July 17, 1911, at his late home in Washington, Pa. Mr. Burwell had a remarkable war record, serving with distinction and bravery during the days of the rebellion. In 1855 he was married to Maria Lanham, of West Virginia, who died May 18, 1900. Several years later he married Miss Zulemma Dun, of West Virginia, who survives, as do also srveral children, as follows: Mrs. S. E. Miller, of Washington, Pa.; Henry S. of Withers, West Virginia; Ezra, of Pocatillo, Idaho; B. F., of Oklahoma City; Ira L., of Pine Grove Mill, from whom we obtained these facts; William J., of Grofs, West Virginia; B. D., of Pullman, West Virginia; Mrs. Samuel Hickman, of Auburn, West Virginia, Della and Fay, at home. Following his second marriage Mr. Burwell removed to Virginia, where he lived when the dark clouds of war hovered over the country. In the spring of 1861 he was urgently pressed to join the Confederate army or leave the country. He chose the latter course, leaving with all his possessions in the night-time and fleeing to Pennsylvania. One month later he joined the Eighteenth Penna. Regiment in defending the Stars and Stripes, serving under General Thomas in the Army of the Tennessee. In an encounter with Hood's rebel cavalry he was severely wounded and left on the field as dead, but he was gathered up by his comrades, medical aid was administered and he recovered. After the war he entered the ministry as a Baptist preacher, preaching in five different States. During his service he married over 200 couples and baptized upward of 1500 persons. He preached the gospel for 54 years and was, indeed, a true soldier of the cross as well as of his country. Mr. Burwell seldom if ever talked of the incidents of the war, possibly due to the fact that his wife was of southern birth and also that her friends held to the southern cause. The noted scout and spy, Jerry Lanham, was her uncle. However, the venerable old soldier, like his great commander, Grant, said: "Let us live and forget, and let us have peace." His remains were laid at rest at Washington, Pa., on July 19, Rev. S. Parcell conducting the services. May his mound ever be kept green as his memory is bright.

CO. L. "MAKES GOOD" IN CAMP AT SELINSGROVE

Interesting Letter About Doings of Centre County Soldiers.

ALL WELL AND HAPPY

Boys Enthusiastic Over Splendid Site For Third Brigade Encampment—Kept Busy With Drills and Marches—Home on Saturday.

By J. Homer Decker.

Camp Ezra Ripple, Selinsgrove, Pa., July 26.—The boys of Company L, Third Brigade, which means the boys from good, old Centre County, have been in camp since Friday evening, last, and the record to date reads:

"Every man on duty; all well and happy."

We are now entering upon the last lap of the encampment, and while the week of drill and instruction has been a hard and thorough one, all the boys have acquitted themselves with credit. Our present plans call for arrival home some time Saturday evening.

Company L arrived in camp at 7.30 o'clock on Friday evening after a long and tedious ride and found the camp grounds located about two miles east of Selinsgrove. There being fewer automobiles here than in Bellefonte, the first thing we did was to hike the two miles. It was worth it, however, for when we arrived we found one of the finest camping grounds in the State. Everything was in readiness for the boys and it required but a glance to learn that a convenient and instructive camp had been laid out.

The advance detail, under Sergeant Claude W. Smith, had our street well formed and the tents up, so that by 9 o'clock we had supper—our first meal in camp. By the time the boys were through supper every mother's son was so tired that it required no effort to hear the approach of the Sand Man. To most of us it seemed that we had hardly closed our eyes until we were routed out. It was then 5 A. M., Saturday, but with every man in line when the roll was called we were marched off to the mess tent for breakfast. There we found an excellent breakfast, piping hot and teasing our already well warmed up appetites. This is the menu which had been prepared by the cooks, William Smith and George A. Bottorf: Two poached eggs on toast, good hot coffee and breakfast food. Everything tasted so good that, like the sleeping the night before, it was over almost before one got well started. Soon everything was hustle and bustle for the formal camp opening at 7.30 A. M., when we promptly marched to the reviewing field. There the entire Third Brigade was assembled, representing something like 3,000 men. The camp opening was a beautiful sight and was witnessed by a large crowd of visitors who had come from all directions.

On returning to camp we received a hurry-up order to change clothing and turn out for a one-hour drill. To many of us that hour was made up of not less than 120 minutes, and some thought it was even longer. We were not back in camp very long until dinner was served. The work for the afternoon consisted of a tactical march for the officers, who did not get back until 4.30 o'clock. At 5.30 we were ordered out for brigade review.

Evening brought with it a welcome relief from the strenuous work of the day and we greatly enjoyed a fine concert by the famous Repasz band, of Williamsport, which is the regimental band. By the way, we are camping just to the right of the regiment, with the band next to us, so that we always have plenty of fine music.

The first order issued on Sunday morning proved to be a five-minute notice to the officers for a tactical walk, from 7.30 to 10 o'clock, and at 10.30 we were marched, in regimental form and headed by the band, to the Y. M. C. A. tent, where we were favored with a fine sermon by Rev. Dr. R. Leighton Gearhart, pastor of the Lewisburg Reformed church. Neatly printed programs were provided for the service and contained the words to the hymns, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Lead Kindly Light," and "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Returning to company quarters we sat down to what was surely a fine dinner made possible by the efficiency of Commissary Sergeant Harry A. Taylor. During the afternoon we were at our leisure until 4.30, when we had brigade review, in full dress uniform. This grand spectacle was witnessed by a crowd which was estimated at from 15,000 to 20,000, special trains having brought visitors from Lewisburg, Sun-

BERRIES FOR THOUSANDS OF HUCKLEBERRY PIES

Tons of Luscious Fruit Being Shipped From Centre County.

GO TO WESTERN POINTS

H. E. Crouse, of Aaronsburg, Sending Away 30 Bushels Daily—Big Squads of Berry Pickers Find Rich Harvest in Seven Mountains.

Huckleberries by the ton are being shipped from Centre County to Johnstown, Cleveland, Ohio, and other markets, H. E. Crouse of Aaronsburg, having thus far shipped upward of 20,000 quarts. Other shippers are each day sending away many crates of the luscious berries and the demand seems to be in excess of the supply.

During the extremely hot weather berry pickers were unable to make much headway, but with the cooler weather of the last two weeks all lo t time has apparently been made up and the shipments have been correspondingly large. Each day this week Mr. Crouse, alone, has been shipping upward of 30 bushels, or almost 1,000 quarts of huckleberries, and he expects to maintain this high point for two or three weeks longer. His total shipments for the season will be somewhere in the neighborhood of 35,000 quarts. Large express trucks, piled high with crates loaded with huckleberries, have been received in Bellefonte almost daily for the last week or more, the berries coming in over the Lewisburg & Montandon road and being transferred here to eastern and western trains.

Virtually all of the huckleberries shipped by Mr. Crouse have been picked on the Seven mountains, the berry pickers making up a squad of from 25 to 50. At present they are receiving 8 cents a quart, delivered in bulk to Mr. Crouse. He is receiving several cents more a quart on present shipments of berries in perfect condition.

Ira D. Garman Honored.

The Philadelphia "Journal of Commerce" announces the appointment of Ira D. Garman, formerly of Bellefonte, but now of Philadelphia, as one of the delegates of the Pennsylvania Retail Jewelers' Association to the coming annual convention of the National Retail Jewelers' Association, which will be held in Richmond, Virginia, August 1. Speaking of Mr. Garman, the "Journal of Commerce" says: "Mr. Garman enjoys the reputation of being an eminently active and progressive man of affairs, and his innate ability and enterprising trend of mind, supplemented by the foundation traits of firmness, thrift and industry, have combined to secure for him distinction and prominence as one of the foremost representatives of the retail jewelry trade in the State.

Two Barns Burned.

The barn of Henry Fishburn and also that of David Rhinesmith, located on the Boalsburg pike, near Bellefonte, were destroyed by fire early Tuesday evening. The loss is fully covered by insurance, with the exception of that on a quantity of wheat which belonged to one of Mr. Fishburn's sons and which had just been threshed. The flames originated in the Rhinesmith barn, due supposedly to spontaneous combustion. The Fishburn barn, which was located but a short distance away, also took fire and both buildings and the contents were completely destroyed.

The Academy Catalogue.

The annual catalogue of the Bellefonte Academy is just off the press and is replete with interesting information regarding "the school in the mountains." Some especially attractive illustrations, including photographs of the baseball, football and track teams, are but a few of numerous striking features. The story of the year just closed, as told in the catalogue, foreshadows an even more successful year to come, all of which is deeply gratifying to Headmaster J. R. Hughes and the many friends of the institution.

A Letter From Missouri.

"The Republican" was glad to this week receive a letter from Mrs. S. S. Walter, a valued subscriber who resides in Kansas City, Missouri. Mrs. Walter enclosed a postal money order to advance her subscription to "The Republican" another year. With typical western spirit, Mrs. Walter writes of conditions in her State: "We are having some rains and local showers, which help vegetation some, but we should have a great deal more. But no one seems to be discouraged."

INJURED BY BLAST

William Kean, of Pleasant Gap, Struck on Head by Small Stone

William Kean, one of the most energetic and popular young employees at the White Rock quarries, was seriously injured by a blast while at work on Friday afternoon of last week. He was struck on the forehead by a piece of rock, supposedly about the size of a hen's egg, the force of the blow being sufficient to pierce the skull. He was removed to the Bellefonte hospital, where his injuries were promptly dressed and where he now is recovering as rapidly as could be expected.

Kean and a number of other workmen were called in from the quarries while a blast was to be fired off. The several persons in the group remained under cover in a shelter shed and the blast was without incident. Kean started to leave the shelter shed when he was warned that a second blast was to follow. He replied that he was only going to the water bucket, a short distance away.

As the second blast was fired Kean, then several hundred feet from the scene of the explosion, happened to look up. As he did so a small piece of rock, hurled with terrific force, struck him squarely between the eyes. The accident happened so quickly that his companions were dazed for a few seconds, being hardly able to appreciate what had happened. When it was realized that Kean was badly injured medical aid was quickly summoned and with the arrival of the ambulance he was removed to the hospital.

Kean has a host of friends who sympathize with him in his misfortune and who will rejoice to see him back on the job.

BOYS BADLY BURNED

Injured by Exploding Powder While Serenading Wedding Couple.

Porter Snyder and Harry Sheesley, both of Woodward, were badly injured by exploding powder while serenading a newly wedded couple at Fiedler late Monday night. Young Snyder was terribly burned about the face and arms. Sheesley's burns were chiefly on his face.

The young men were serenading Professor Robert Winkleblech and his bride, from Lancaster, who were married on July 8 and who were visiting the groom's father, J. W. Winkleblech. They were exploding powder on an anvil when, possibly due to the using of an unusually large quantity of powder, there was a blinding flush and the flames seemed to envelop young Snyder and Sheesley. Dr. C. S. Musser, of Aaronsburg, was summoned and dressed the injuries of the unfortunate young men. Snyder was so badly burned that his removal home was deemed unwise and he remained over night with the Winkleblech family.

To Reconstruct State Road.

Contractor R. B. Taylor is reconstructing that section of the recently built State road, extending from the E. K. Rhoads property to and along the Beaver-Hoy row, in Bellefonte. The asphaltum dressing which he used last summer in putting down the road failed to stand the test of daily traffic, the surface of the road apparently crumbling to pieces. Supposedly the hot sun dried out the asphaltum and thus destroyed its binding qualities. Contractor Taylor plans removing the defective surface and replacing it with a more substantial one, a higher and tougher grade of asphaltum to be used, such as was included in the building of the State road in Allegheny Street, between Linn Street and Pike alley. The latter section of road appears to be more than meeting requirements.

Hospital Notes.

$5000 WATER PLANT WINS IN UNIONVILLE

Proposed Borough Debt Increase Approved at Polls, 40 to 23.

TO HAVE FIRE COMPANY

New Water System Includes 6 Inch Main From Reservoir and Street Plugs for Fire Protection—Insurance Rates to Drop One-fourth.

By a vote of 40 to 23, or a majority of 17, the borough of Unionville on Saturday, at a special election held for that purpose, approved a proposed $5000 increase of the borough debt, the money to be used in installing a water plant. The advocates of the proposed increase anticipated a somewhat closer vote, the subject having been the bone of much contention among the citizens of Unionville for several months past. The total vote on the question, 63, represents approximately two-thirds of the registered vote in the borough.

The proposition having been approved at the polls bonds to the amount of $5,000 will be issued and the proceeds at once devoted to the installing of the water plant. The bonds will mature in 25 years and are at the rate of 4½ percent. An engineer will be secured to prepare a detailed plan of the proposed system, source of water supply etc., which in turn must be submitted for inspection and approval to the State Health Department, at Harrisburg. When the plans are approved bids for the work will be advertised for and the contract awarded to the lowest bidder.

It is proposed securing the water from the Muncy mountain, south of Unionville, a reservoir to be erected a short distance below the source of supply. The reservoir will be located at a height sufficient to give a pressure of 80 pounds. From the reservoir the water will be piped into Unionville by means of a six-inch main, with four-inch laterals.

In addition to making it possibe for residents to pipe water into their homes provision will be made for street plugs for fire service. Carrying out this plan still further, a completely and modernly equipped fire company will be organized in Unionville. With the installing of the water plant there will be a reduction of one-fourth in fire insurance rates in the borough, which was one of the strongest cards in favor of the proposed loan for the improvement.

Snake Surrendered Frog.

Coming from pretty nearly anybody else, we would be inclined to accept the following snake story with a grain of salt. The story comes to us first-handed from Harry C. Valentine, superintendent at the Scotia mines, and therefore must be true. Assistant Superintendent William Burnside vouches for it, and this without a trace of a smile, so that its a pretty safe bet the story is true. Here it is, anyhow: According to Mr. Valentine snakes are this year more plentiful in and about Scotia than has been the case for many years. Hardly a day passes but one or more snakes are killed. On Friday of last week Mr. Valentine and several of his men cleared away some oil soaked debris which had collected underneath a steam boiler. While engaged in so doing they found a copperhead snake that measured considerably more than two feet. Mr. Valentine quickly seized a shovel and plunged it into the snake's back. Thus far there was nothing remarkable about the incident. A second or two after he struck the snake with the shovel, Mr. Valentine explained, the snake's mouth opened and a fairly large frog was forced out. Mr. Valentine says that he tossed the frog into a pool of water and in a few seconds the little animal was apparently restored to life and quickly hopped away. The one blow from the shovel was sufficient to kill the snake. On the previous day, Mr. Valentine added, a large blowing viper snake crawled into the boiler house, nearby the Scotia mines office, while several persons were at work there. A gun was secured and the snake's head was shot off.

Congressman Kipp Dead.

Word was received in Williamsport on Tuesday of the sudden death in British Columbia of Congressman George W. Kipp, of Towanda. Mr. Kipp was a Democrat and was reputed to be a millionaire.

FAMOUS "CHICKEN RAID"

One Who Took Part in That March to Southern Boarder in June, 1863.

From the Everett Press: "As the time for the forty-eighth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg is nearing, a few words in connection with the affair might be cheering to some persons now living who had part in the famous "Chicken Raid," as it was styled by many persons.

On the afternoon of June 21, 1863, the news came to Altoona that the army of Northern Virginia of the Confederate side had broken camp in that State and was moving northward into Pennsylvania. The city, then a borough, was in a furore of excitement. The Pennsylvania Railroad company was moving its household goods from the Logan house. An old farmer living in Tuckahoe took his horses and struck for the Alleghenies. Your scribe was then going to school to Professor John Miller—afterward the first city superintendent—in an old building used for school purposes on the hill near Eleventh street.

Company D of the One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth Regiment; Captain Campbell, Company K of the same regiment; Captain H. B. Huff, all nine month men who had returned home, fell in line again with Captain John Calvert's company of Tuckahoe mountain rangers. Being well armed with muskets sent by the United States government into the Pennsylvania railroad yards, we left McKee's Gap by way of Duncansville, there being joined by Company A, One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, from Tyrone; Lieutenant Andrews' company, from the same place, and Captain Thomas C. Fleck's company, from Sinking Valley.

Here the famous stone wall stands that was built by the raiders and the line of march taken up by way of Freedom toward Bedford, every man having a ham or a loaf of bread sticking on his bayonet. Chickens were plenty and, of course, the men had to live. They slept anywhere at night and provided their own eatables.

At Bedford, Samuel Steel Blair, of Hollidaysburg, quartermaster for the raiders, was issuing orders to men who wished to go on horseback, the agreement being that the rider would return the animal safely to its owner if all went well; if not, the government would pay for the horse, it was a very provident arrangement.

The march was taken up from Bedford via Bloody Run, where we met Company G., of the Twelfth Pennsylvania cavalry coming this way, being part of General Milroy's brigade that had been defeated by the Confederates the Sunday before.

The march was continued to Harrisonville, where a halt was made for the night. Here we were joined by the Eighty-Seventh Pennsylvania, Colonel James Tearney, of Hollidaysburg, and the Eighteenth Connecticut Regiment both being part of General Milroy's brigade who was there in prison.

On Sunday there was preaching by the Rev. D. Sheerer, of the First United Brethren church, and Rev. A. H. Sembower, of the First Baptist church, both of Altoona. In the evening the soldiers retired to whatever quarters they could find.

After getting something to eat in the morning, the line of march was again taken up by the green raiders, leaving the volunteer United States soldiers coming this way, and when the "greenies" met the rebs at McConnellsburg such a scatterment was had that no one present at that time will ever forget. In the melee two rebs were killed and three wounded from our side. A Mr. Stiffler, of Company G, Twelfth Pennsylvania cavalry, was wounded in the arm. He was afterwards taken prisoner and starved to death at Andersonville prison.

Then the homeward march of the raiders began on the evening of June 30, by way of Burnt Cabins, and after marching all night they lay scattered all over the ground. In the morning sounds from a distance could be heard of cannon firing and the battle of Gettysburg was on.

Stopping at Orbisonia that night we were quartered in the United Brethren church and every other place we could get. We boarded a freight train at Mt. Union and having a lot of ammunition on hand, a contiuued fusilade was kept up the whole way to Altoona, the men turning their muskets over to the government.

While the raiders were celebrating the Fourth of July here the rebels, having been defeated by the Army of the Potomac, were leaving rather hurriedly for their homes in the far off south. While many funny incidents took place which the boys have talked over many a time with keen enjoyment, and while they showed their patriotism by rushing to Pennsylvania's defense, yet we've never heard of any of them having been promoted or granted a pension and we never expect to.

If anyone doubts the truthfulness of these statements we refer you to Statistician W. W. Osborne, principal of the Jefferson school, or to Drummer Boy W. A. Patton, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company.

Hints for Campers.

A few hints from experienced campers may be welcomed by novices who are just now planning their first camp.

To make a quick fire, drive a forked stake into the ground and upon it slant a green stick with the stub of a branch left on the upper end to hold the handle of pot or kettle and fasten down the lower end to the ground. The bottom of the pot or kettle should clear the ground two feet Gather wood, party shave down three sticks, but leave shavings on stick. Stand up in a tripod with shavings down. Build wood around in the same way, leaving plenty of air spaces. Light shavings and you will be pleased with the results. By the time the water has boiled for tea or coffee your fire will be a mass of coals ready for roasting, frying or boiling.

When the wood is damp, cut off several sections of candle, light them all at once and set under the damp kindling. This will give a steady blaze and will start the kindling burning.

If your camp happens to be in a section of country where there is clay in the soil, you will be able to cook many a delicious dish by first wrapping it in clay.

Work the clay until it is like soft putty. Roll out in a sheet about an inch thick and large enough to cover completely fish or bird. Place the covered game in fire, cover with coals and cook about an hour if it is of medium size. When done break open the hard casing of clay and the skin will adhere to it, leaving the meat clean and "fit for a king." A delicious way for fish of larger size.

Small fish may be steamed. Wrap each fish in leaves or paper and the whole in leaves and paper, soaking the whole bundle until it is dripping wet. Place on a bed of coals. You will pronounce them the "best ever I ate." Vegetables and potatoes may be steamed with advantage. Corn is especially fine cooked this way.

If you have thought to bring along some asbestos sheets you can make cones of asbestos and, setting the small end securely between the coals, bake eggs, apples, and potatoes to perfection. These cones are invaluable to the open air camper, as a good sized cone will take the place of several cooking utensils.

If you can get dry roots for your fire you will have a very hot blaze with very little smoke.

One thing that every camper should remember is to carefully put out the fire when "moving on." If possible, soak thoroughly with water. Two crossed sticks or branches upon ashes mean that you have put out fire and ground is open for next camper.

Early Days in Philipsburg.

The Philipsburg "Journal" publishes this interesting article, recalling men and events in Philipsburg forty-three years ago:

Owen Hancock, one of our oldest and most highly esteemed citizens, is the owner of a copy of the first number of the weekly edition of the Philipsburg Journal. It is dated October 17, 1868, and was published by Jerome C. Dutcher and E. H. Ellsworth.

In looking over the advertising columns it is observed that practically all the people who were represented in its columns have died, gone out of business or moved away from our town.

Among the items we note the following.

That dwelling houses were reported scarce in Philipsburg.

That the first frost of the season occurred on the morning the first copy of the Journal was printed.

That the town had a Good Templars lodge with nearly 300 members.

That the telegraph poles between Philipsburg and Tyrone were just being placed.

That the third story of Dr. T. B. Potter's brickblock was being fitted up for a Masonic Hall.

That election day had passed off quietly, and that on the night of the issue of the paper the Republican victory in Pennsylvania and Philipsburg was to be celebrated by a torch light procession of the Grant and Colfax club and a grand illumination and bonfire. The Republican majority in the borough was 6.

That a young Mr. Nuttall, aged 23, presumably a son of the late John Nuttall, had been reported drowned on Oct. 12th at Parkersburg, W. Va., by falling from a steamboat, while returning from a trip to the western country.

That the Good Templars of Clearfield county had held in Philipsburg on Sept. 8th and 9th their second quarterly conference, at which M. L. Ganoe presided, and of which O. Perry Jones, who reported the proceedings at length, was secretary.

RECIPROCITY WINS

Senate Passes Measure Without Amendment and President Signs It.

The Reciprocity bill was passed by the Senate without amendment on Saturday by a vote of 53 to 27, and this week received the signature of President Taft making reciprocity between Canada and the United States an accomplished fact, so far as this Government is concerned.

The vote was but one short of the two-to-one majority predicted by Senator Penrose and generally expected. Of the affirmative votes, the Republicans contributed 21, while the Democrats gave 32. Three of the Republican votes came from insurgents—Brown, of Nebraska; Poindexter, of Washington, and Works, of California—while 10 insurgents, 14 regular Republicans and three Democrats combined to make up the 27 opposition. The three Democrats who opposed the bill were Bailey, Clarke, of Arkansas, and Simmons, of North Carolina. One Democrat, Thornton, of Louisiana, was paired against the bill with duPont, of Delaware, a regular Republican, who would have voted for it had he been present. Both Foster, of Louisiana, and Paynter, of Kentucky, Democrats, whose attitude toward the bill was uncertain up to the hour the vote was taken, turned up on the affirmative side.

Before the final vote on the Reciprocity bill itself was reached there were 13 roll calls on the various pending amendments, each roll call resulting in the rejection of the proposed changes by overwhelming majorities. Practically all the affirmative votes for the amendments came from the insurgents. There were no surprises in these votes, as it had been the settled policy of both the Democratic and Republican supporters of the measure to put it through in the precise form in which it came from the House, in accordance with the desire of the President and the demand of the advocates of the legislation throughout the country.

Immediately after the passage of the bill the President congratulated Senator Penrose by telephone on his successful handling of the measure in the Senate and invited him to accompany him as far as Philadelphia on the train which conveyed him to Beverly.

The President was not able to affix his signature to the Reciprocity bill until this week, as the bill under the rules had to be finally engrossed in the House, in which it originated, while that House is in session. Had the House remained in session until late Saturday afternoon the final engrossing of the bill could have been done then and the bill signed by the President before he left for Beverly. This was what Senator Penrose wanted done, but the House leaders had no work for the House to do when it met and it adjourned after a session of nine minutes.

The Canadian Parliament has not yet acted on the agreement, and with one exception the provisions of the bill as passed by Congress will not become effective until the President issues a proclamation that Canada has ratified the pact. The exception is in the paper and pulp section of the bill, which becomes immediately effective with the President's signature to the law.

Taken Home to Her Mother.

A fifteen-year old girl who is in the habit of going to the passenger station and flirting with traveling men, succeeded recently in landing a beau, says an Exchange. She gaily consented when he asked to walk home with her, but was a bit surprised when upon arriving there he bodly rang the bell. Her mother came to the door and Mr. Traveling Man delivered a short lecture something like this: Madame, here's your little girl. I picked her up at the depot, a place where girls of her age should not go alone, unless on business. I have a daughter at home about the age of this one. I am away from home a good deal and don't know for certain whether my daughter meets the trains and flirts or not, but if she does I certainly would be pleased if some one would do that which I have done with your daughter—take her home to her mother.

W. H. Fields Dead.

William H. Fields, aged 75 years, 2 months and 29 days, died at his home in Gaysport, of creeping paralysis, on July 11. Mr. Fields, who was born in Huntingdon county, was a veteran of the Civil war. He entered the service of the Pennsylvania railroad company at the age of 17, working with a construction squad until 1873, when the Williamsburg branch was completed, and he was made foreman of the track between Williamsburg and Flowing Springs. During the war Mr. Fields served in Company A, Twenty-second Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. In 1889, while working for the railroad company, he was injured and was transferred to the Juniata shops, where he held the position of sweeper until five years ago, when he retired. Deceased was a member of the Church of Disciples, of Altoona.—Huntingdon Globe.

Misleading Sign.

Mr. Rural—If there ain't no objection, me and my family will stop in here an' take a rest. I see you've got a sign, 'family entrance,' over y'r door.

Lounger—If you wasn't from Squedunk or some such a town, you'd know that that there sign means that this a'n't no place fer families to enter.

Good Sandwiches.

Broiled Beef Sandwiches—This is how one party managed to have hot beef sandwiches out in the woods. The beef was scraped, seasoned with salt, pepper and a few drops of onion juice and a little celery salt. The mixture spread in slightly buttered slices of bread, not too thin. The slices were wrapped in cheesecloth to keep them clean and to allow them to dry a little. A campfire was made, and when a nice bed of glowing embers was ready each member of the party toasted his or her own sandwich just the length of time desired—rare, done or well down.

Berkshire Sandwich.—Boil a young fowl perfectly tender in as little water as possible. When done, remove all skin, fat, bones and gristle and chop the meat very fine in wooden chopping bowl, not food chopper. To a good-sized fowl, add a cup of minced ham, a few truffles sliced very fine, and moisten with the chicken liquor. Season to taste with salt, pepper, mustard and mushroom catsup. Mix and chop to a fine paste.

Olive and Cheese Sandwich.—Take equal quantities of cottage and nippy yellow cheese; season with mustard, a little horseradish, salt and pepper; add a few chopped olives—ripe olives are especially nice; make into a paste with a little thick cream, and spread thin slices of brown bread.

Rambler's Sandwich.—To a cup of minced chicken, moistened with its own gravy, add a tablespoonful of rich grated or shaved cheese; season with salt, paprike, mustard and a little onion juice; spread a little stiff mayonnaise on crisp lettuce leaves, with a spoonful of the chicken mixture between and place between slices of unbuttered Boston brown bread. Brooklyn "Eagle."

Good Things to Eat.

If we are to believe the diettitians, lightness is to be the dominant ideas in the seasonable luncheon. For this reason it is well to make some vegetables the main-stay of the meal, and if meat is used at all, to have it of secondary importance. Rice is easily digested and nourishing and is most appetizing when combined with tomatoes. A luncheon with these two excellent vegetables cooked together is composed of stuffed tomatoes, sliced beef, fruit salad and iced tea or coffee.

Sliced Beef in Brown Gravy. The cold beef remaining from yesterday's roast can be converted into a delightful luncheon dish with little preparation. Cut the meat in slices about a quarter of an inch thick. Place them in a frying pan with a tablespoonful of hot water and allow it to simmer down. This will heat the meat through. Pour over it the gravy left from the roast dinner and enough water to bring it the proper consistency. Let the meat simmer in the gravy for about ten minutes. Pour out on a deep platter and garnish with leaves of curley parsley.

Seasonable Fruit Salad—An excellent fruit salad for this season of the year is made of sliced pineapple, red raspberries and sliced bananas. It should not be allowed to stand before it is served, as the fruit juices should not mix, but each be allowed to retain its own flavor. Use equal portions of the fruit and serve them in a basket made of a crisp leaf of lettuce. Some like a dressing of sweetened organge juice over their fruit salad, while others prefer an oil or French dressing. To make the salad a trifle more substantial, it may be dusted over with grated cream cheese, when the orange is used, fruit and cheese making a delicious combination.

Care of Gray Hair.

White hair, like white gowns, needs careful handling, or it soon is ugly and ill-kept looking.

Brushes and combs should be washed everyday or so. A dirty brush makes white hair dull.

Ordinary shampoo mixtures are apt to make white hair streaky. The best for it is made from the whites of two eggs mixed lightly with a teaspoonful of warm water.

Rub mixture well into scalp, parting half in strands and also washing long hair. Rinse thoroughly with lukewarm water, then cold. Either spring or filtered water should be used on white hair.

Use tonics with caution. A little white vaseline rubbed into the scalp is as good as anything.

White hair to be lovely must have a silvery tint. When the hair is at pepper and salt stage it can sometimes be made white quickly by intelligent treatment by a professional.

Shampooing the hair with lemon is excellent for white hair. Put half the cut lemon in a thin muslin cloth and rub over scalp, which has first been thoroughly wet.

Kidney Diseases are Curable.

Under certain conditions. The right medicine must be taken before the disease has progressed too far. Mr. Perry A. WOMEN HELPED

By Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for Kidneys and Liver.

Disorders of women are the result of general bodily weakness. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a strength builder and for women it has proved of great value. Thousands testify to this. A sick woman almost always has kidney trouble, which causes pain in the back, headache, nervousness and other distressing symptoms. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helps the Kidneys and Liver to act properly, purifies the blood and gently moves the bowels, striking at the cause of Kidney, Liver, Blood and Bladder troubles. For over 25 years it has enjoyed steady and merited success, for it is an honest remedy and has stood the test of time. Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y. for a free sample bottle and valuable medical booklet. Large bottle $1.00 at all druggists.

Stopping an Artery.

The prompt application of the tourniquet or even of the finger to stop the bleeding of an artery before the doctor comes will often save life. A wound anywhere below the middle of the upper arm or below the middle of the thigh may be easily stopped by a tourniquet. The simplest improvised form of this implement, which may be always found ready to hand, is a linen handkerchief and a strong stick. The best place to apply the tourniquet for a wound of the arm is above the elbow, where the pulsations of an artery may be felt by any one. The handkerchief should be tied around the arm rather loosely. The stick is thrust in and turned to tighten it until the blood ceases to flow. Of course this is only a temporary relief till the coming of the doctor, who, in case of serious bleeding, must be summoned as soon as possible. When you have nothing at hand in a case of sudden accident even the pressure of the forefinger and the thumb over the wound may arrest the flow of blood for the time.

NEW ROAD PETITIONS

Counties Will be Required to File New Applications for State Aid.

Numerous petitions for State aid in the construction of roads sent to the State Highway Department at Harrisburg under the terms of the acts of 1903 and 1905, providing for road-building, will be returned to the counties, townships and boroughs where they originated, owing to the fact that the Sproul main highway bill provides for a different basis of State aid.

By the old law the State paid three-fourths of the cost of a section of road, the county being liable for one-eighth and the interested township or borough for a similar amount. By the new law the State pays but half, and as the petitions had not been acted upon they cannot apply to roads under the act of 1911. It is expected that a number of them will be redrawn and returned to the Highway Commissioners, as the local districts in many cases are not on the line of main highways.

In addition there are about 30 contracts pending on which bids were opened and agreements signed by counties and districts to carry through contracts before the passage of the Sproul bill. These contracts will be disposed of by Commissioner E. M. Biglow at an early day. Some of them are on the lines of main highways.

Hospitals Must Make Collections.

Deputy Attorney General Hargest recently rendered an opinion the effect of which is that State hospitals can collect by suit monies from persons whose relatives are inmates of the institutions. The opinion was given R. Scott Ammerman, counsel for the State hospital at Danville, who desired to know whether the hospital or the state should institute proceedings. Mr. Hargest says further that not only is it the privilege of the hospital to make collections, but that as an agent of the commonwealth it is the duty of the hospital to make collections.

Bumper Crops on Gripp Farm.

John D. Delozier, of the Col. H. A. Gripp farm, east of Tyrone will certainly have what is termed a bumper crop. He claims he will have 1200 bushels of wheat from 60 acres: 1800 bushels of oats from 34 acres; 300 bushels of corn from 30 acres and 50 tons of hay from 30 acres. He says that the blight killed his potatoes and that they will be an utter failure.—Tyrone Herald.

The Crops.

Bradstreet's Report says: Much needed rains have visited practically all parts of the country this week, arresting crop deterioration and in some instances repairing earlier damage. Just how much the benefit has been will probably never be known, but corn in the west, spring wheat in the northwest, cotton in the southwest and crops generally along the Atlantic coast have all been benefited. Hence there is a disposition to look upon the brighter side of things though some earlier damage cannot possibly be repaired.

Despite the rains there is a disposition to reduce spring-wheat estimates, owing to drought damage in western North Dakota and because of the reported spread of black rust in the Red river valley. Southern South Dakota estimates are of one-half to two-thirds of last year's crops.

Corn has been helped in leading surplus states, though Nebraska notes the need of more rain still. The plant in the west is well advanced for this season of the year. Rain came too late to save corn in northern Texas, which is practically a failure. East of the Mississippi, in the large surplus states, corn looks well. Early sweet corn in the Atlantic coast states was hurt by dry weather.

Winter-wheat threshings are turning out well and quality is good, but the wheat crop promise as a whole is not much, if anything, better, than a year ago.

Very cool weather visited the Canadian northwest this week, but damage by frosts is denied.

The drought in the southwestern part of the cotton belt was effectually broken this week. North, central and west Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas all had good rains and cotton was very materially helped. The rains came too late to save early corn, but much planting of late forage crops has been done, and some of the losses in early feeding crops may be made up. In parts of the lower Mississippi valley rather too much rain is reported, and the same report comes from parts of the south Atlantic coast, but no damage is as yet reported. All opinion seems still to point to a total yield in excess of the record.

Eastern coast crop prospects have been helped by rain, but earlier dry weather has left its mark on early vegetables, notably peas, tomatoes, sweet corn and potatoes. Hay has turned out better than earlier expected. Canadian hay imports are large despite the duty.

James A. Pratt Ordained.

The numerous friends of James Albert Pratt, of Unionville, will be interested to learn of an impressive service held in the Presbyterian church, at Jeffersonville, near Norristown, on Thursday evening, July 20. On that occasion the Presbytery of Philadelphia North ordained Mr. Pratt to the Christian ministry and formally installed him as pastor of the Jeffersonville Presbyterian church. Mr. Pratt is a young man of whom Centre County may be justly proud. He prepared for the ministry at Princeton and his first charge is at Jeffersonville. He is eminently qualified to pursue the noble calling which he has made his life work. In addition to this he is endowed with a most pleasing personality and a sunny disposition which attracts and holds friends. We venture the prediction that Mr. Pratt's services in the pulpit will be rewarded with winning many men to the cause of the Master. In his power to win and hold the confidence of men he is especially well blessed.

O'Connell's Wonderful Oratory.

Daniel O'Connell, the Irish orator, spoke in Covent Garden, London, many years ago, and John Coleman, an old English actor, pictured him as follows: "The audience hung spellbound on the words of the great orator. His resonant and magnificent voice, flavored with its rich Hibernian accent, held both soul and sense captive. As for me, my Celtic blood took fire, my heart throbbed with passionate indignation or melted into tears as he dwelt upon the wrongs of my beloved country. Never, surely, was such a born orator! Stern men cried one moment and laughed the next. Strange to say, they never laughed in the wrong place, though once at least he afforded them a unique opportunity. As he approached the end of his oration, carried away by his theme, he took his wig off (a brown 'jazey') put it in his hat and mopped his beautiful bald brow with a great flaming crimson bandanna. The action appeared so natural and appropriate that no one seemed to think it absurd or even incongruous."

Couldn't Hurt His Brain.

Strickland W. Gillilan says that Sam Jones and "Sunshine Hawks" of Baltimore, the revivalists, were invited to the home of a good brother and sister in the church. At the dinner table it transpired that the sister had had a sinister purpose in issuing the invitation, for she said: "Mr. Jones, I wish you'd tell my husband that smoking is injurious to him. I know it is, but he won't believe it. I wish you'd tell him, and it might have some influence over him."

"No, sister," said Jones, who was himself an inveterate smoker, "I can't tell him that. Smoking injures only the human brain. And he hasn't any brain to injure, or he wouldn't have married you. Now, sister, I came here to eat—that is what I was invited for—not to lecture. So if you'll carve that turkey, give me a piece of the white meat and Hawks a leg we'll be all right." And that husband's gratitude lives yet.

Defining a Boundary Line.

In 1847 Rufus Choate appeared in behalf of parties whose rights were affected by the boundary line between Massachusetts and Rhode Island, thus described in the agreement:

"Beginning," etc., "thence to an angle on the easterly side of Watuppa pond, thence across said pond to the two rocks on the westerly side of said pond and near thereto, thence westerly to the buttonwood tree in the village of Fall River."

In his argument, commenting on the boundary, Mr. Choate thus referred to this part of the description: "A boundary line between two sovereign states described by a couple of stones near a pond and a buttonwood sapling in a village! The commissioners might as well have defined it as starting from a blue jay, thence to a swarm of bees in hiving time and thence to 500 foxes with firebrands tied to their tails."—Minneapolis Journal.

When Parasols Began.

Parasols when they first came into use must have been cumbersome. Henri Estienne, writing in 1578, speaks of a parasol as capable generally of sheltering four persons from the sun. And when they diminished in circumference the material still remained of the heaviest. Red velvet parasols, with heavy gold fringes, were carried by ladies of fashion in the days of Louis XIV. At that time it was possible when crossing a bridge in Paris to hire a parasol at one end and deposit it at the other, the charge for the accommodation being a sou. Under the regency fashion went to the other extreme. Men's parasols folded into the shape of a three cornered hat and could thus be carried elegantly under the arm. Ladies' parasols were hinged, so that they could slip into the pocket, for ladies had pockets then.—London Spectator.

Longest Indian Word.

The longest Indian word on record is the following, that was printed in an Indian Bible in 1661:

Wutappesittukqussunnoohwehtunkquoh.

It signifies "kneeling down to him." When the Rev. Cotton Mather, primitive Boston's Puritan pastor, first saw this consolidated phrase it prompted him to jestingly observe that the words of the language must have been growing ever since the dispersion at Babel.—New York Telegram.

Proved Himself Great.

With a sigh she laid down the magazine article upon Daniel O'Connell. "The day of great men," she said, "is gone forever."

"But the day of beautiful women is not," he responded.

She smiled and blushed. "I was only joking," she explained hurriedly.—Western Christian Advocate.

Too Late.

A good many men discover when too late that they made a great mistake in life by not remaining at school a year or two longer than they did.—Rochester Herald.

His Mistake.

"What cured him of flirting?"

"He started a flirtation with a lady who turned out to be selling an encyclopedia at $200 a set."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It Would Answer.

Stringing Gold Beads.

"We used to string gold beads on a slender gold chain," said the jeweler, "but now we don't unless ordered. The gold used in the chain is harder than that of which the beads are made, and so the chain wears the beads in their perforations and channels out little worn places at the ends of the perforations in the circumference of the beads and so makes them less perfect. And, however slender the chain may be, beads strung on a chain do not fall and lie in curves always smooth and graceful. So now usually we string gold beads on a silk cord, a material of perfect smoothness, flexibility and adaptability; on a silk cord the string of beads falls gracefully. To be sure, the silk wears out sooner than a gold chain would do, and if strung on silk the beads should be restrung once or twice a year, according to how much they are worn, but for stringing gold beads a silk cord seems to answer the purpose most perfectly."—New York Sun.

A Paradise For "Old Women."

Talk of growing old at sixty and one recalls a society in which to acquire age was to acquire recognition and social happiness. Lady Mary Montagu discovered this haven for the elderly among the Viennese nobility of the early eighteenth century. "I can assure you," she wrote home to Lady Rich in 1716, "that wrinkles or a small stoop in the shoulders—nay, gray hair itself—is no objection to making new conquests. * * * A woman till five and thirty is only looked upon as a raw girl and can possibly make no noise in the world till about forty. I don't know what your ladyship may think about the matter, but 'tis a considerable comfort to me to know there is upon earth such a paradise for old women, and I am content to be insignificant at present in the design of returning when I am fit to appear nowhere else."

High Winds and Skyscrapers.

Speaking of the effect of high winds upon the skyscrapers, the superintendent of buildings in New York city said:

"Observation has been made on several tall buildings from time to time as to the effect of wind. We find there is a slight movement to almost every building. In the case of some of the tallest this movement frequently amounts to as much as eight or ten inches horizontally, as shown by the plumb lines. However, there is no noticeable vibration, and whatever movement there is is gradual and cannot be felt. This does not affect in any way the safety of the structure, as these buildings are designed to withstand the necessary effects of the wind as well as to support the weight of the building itself and its contents."

The Amateur Tailor.

The university don is not always the helpless and unpractical person of popular caricature. There was, for example, the Mr. Goodhart of Trinity, who, we are told in "Highways and Byways in Cambridge," "was an object of special admiration to all who knew him. He was, in fact, a kind of Admirable Crichton; not only a man of great intellectual power (as fellows of Trinity must needs be, for these fellowships are the blue riband of the university), but excellent at all athletic pursuits and able to do successfully whatever thing he set his hand to. It is recorded that on one occasion a bet was laid that he could not make himself an entire suit of clothes and wear them for a month without their amateur origin being detected. Goodhart won."

Joss Sticks.

The composition of the candles called joss sticks, which are used in all the religious ceremonies of Buddhism, for a long time remained a mystery, the preparation of the sticks being intrusted to certain persons chosen from a limited class. Not long ago, however, a French chemist learned the manner of making joss sticks in Indo-China. A stem of bamboo is rolled in a preparation containing fourteen different odoriferous drugs, two of which are significant as showing a knowledge of chemical and physical properties. These are aconite, which serves to protect the sticks against the attacks of rats and mice, and camphor, which causes them to burn steadily without being periodically extinguished.—New York Press.

Overprecocious.

They are too precocious, these kids. We met a little fellow on the street the other morning and, seeing books under his arm, started conversation with:

"Well, well—are you going to school now?"

"Sure I am," sneered the infant. "W'y wouldn't I? I'm over six."

"And do you love your teacher?"

"Gee, no! That old hen's too old for me!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Knew the Brand.

"Is that a Landseer, Mr. Croesus?" asked the visitor, pausing before the painting.

"No," replied the host; "reckon it is a Durham. See how broad it is between the horns, and see the color and curl on its forehead. That's a genuine Durham sure."—Exchange.

WILL KIMPORT RESIGN?

When Democratic County Chairman Kimport went to Harrisburg without having divulged how he expected to vote on the State Chairmanship it was morally certain that his return home would witness one faction of the local Democrats slapping him on the back and the other faction heaping upon him all manner of abuse. Calling him a traitor, a mis-fit as a County Chairman and a hopeless nonentity as the head of the head of a mere shell of a county organization are but a few of the epithets heaped upon the very modest and unassuming Prothonotary. At that they but mildly express the indignation of the Democrats who were sorely disappointed when Kimport indifferently turned his back upon them and voted with the Guthrie crowd of self-styled reorganizers. The climax to the digust of the so-called regular Democrats in the county came this week with the open declaration by a number of them that the very least Chairman Kimport could do would be to resign and make room for a real Democrat to lead the campaign this year.

Whether Chairman Kimport will oblige the anti-Guthrie Democrats by deserting the chairmanship remains to be seen. The chances are that he will not. There is no way in which the faction he disappointed can get at his official scalp, and furthermore Chairman Kimport is not so sure that they could accomplish much if they did have the chance.

Apparently Chairman Kimport's conscience when he cast his vote for Guthrie for State Chairman was not troubled by the fact that the Guthrie managers openly solicited corruption by offering free railroad tickets to Harrisburg. He excused this on the ground that the anti-Guthrie faction were guilty of the same crime, and that since both sides were guilty it made no difference to him. To avoid a show-down as long as possible Chairman Kimport would not accept a free railroad ticket from either side. However, when he arrived at Harrisburg sidestepping was no longer possible and he had to show his hand. Ignoring the fact that the Hon. P. Gray Meek and the Hon. Johnny Noll and the Hon. "Doc" White claim to have made him Prothonotary and later County Chairman, and that without their support he could never have been elected, Kimport turned against his party organization and cast his lot with the so-called reorganizers. It made no difference to him that Guthrie had not voted for a Democratic candidate for President for many, many years. He was not concerned over the fact that Guthrie bitterly fought Bryan. The knowledge that both the Guthrie and anti-Guthrie crowds had tried to corrupt committeemen by means of free railroad tickets was not sufficient inducement to him to shun both gatherings. For reasons best known to himself, and disregarding the fact that history tells of very few men but who did live to regret breaking away from party lines, Chairman Kimport cast his lot with and his vote for the kickers.

Ever since Chairman Kimport jumped the traces and left the regular organization a lot of local Democrats have been standing on the street corners in Bellefonte, shaking their fists and venturing their wrath upon him. Thus far they have not had the courage to express their true feelings to Chairman Kimport, face to face. It is barely possible that were Chairman Kimport to visit Philipsburg or Rush township just now he might hear what the disappointed Democrats over there have to say about him. It is said that in voting against his regular party organization Chairman Kimport contemptuously ignored petitions from Democrats in those localities requesting that he stand up to the firing line like a man. It is said that a similar petition was sent to Chairman Kimport by numerous Spring township Democrats and that it, too, was accorded a hurry-up trip to the waste basket. In giving such scant courtesy to the signers of these petitions Chairman Kimport no doubt figures that they will vote in November just as he tells them to vote and that anyhow the State Chairmanship wasn't a matter for them to meddle in or bother him with instructions. Apparently Chairman Kimport wants it understood that he is the Boss, that he spells the word with a great, big "B," and that little, insignificant Democrats who butt in with silly suggestions to him have more gall than good sense.

Penrose and the Lorimer Case.

Ever since the honesty of Lorimer's election to the United States Senate has been questioned, there has been a persistent and systematic attempt by the Democrats to besmirch Senator Penrose. These efforts have been redoubled since the convening of the special session of Congress. The intent has been quite obvious. Senator Penrose, as chairman of the Finance Committee has become the Republican leader in the Senate and the one man upon whom President Taft is leaning in the matter of administration measures now before Congress. From the opening day of the special session of Congress the Democrats have been endeavoring by means of numerous investigations to unearth something that might be used as campaign material to defeat President Taft for re-election in 1912.

As the Republican leader in the Senate and the champion of President Taft, Senator Penrose was singled out as the target for slander. The motive behind the campaign of innuendo was to show Senator Penrose to be implicated in any corruption attending Lorimer's election and thus place some stigma upon President Taft. All this has covered a period of many months, during which time Senator Penrose maintained a dignified silence which was in striking contrast to the course of those who were plotting to accomplish his downfall and at the same time undermine the Taft administration.

What was primed to be the climax in the Democratic conspiracy was reached last Friday when Senator Penrose was called to the witness stand in the Lorimer investigation. Senator Penrose's testimony, given in a frank, straightforward manner, was a complete refutation of Democratic insinuation that President Taft was responsible for and involved in the Lorimer election. So complete and comprehensive was Senator Penrose's version of the matter that the Democratic probers, their hopes and expectations blasted were heartily glad when he stepped down from the stand. Senator Penrose's statement of his knowledge of and connection with the election of Lorimer speaks for itself. We submit it to the citizens of Centre County, for thorough analysis and intelligent consideration, as follows:

Senator Penrose said that his sole interest in the Illinois election was to see that State represented in the Senate by a Republican, his first choice having been his former colleague, Hopkins. He said he did not know Mr. Lorimer at the time of his choice and had never spoken to him prior to his election. The Senator told the committee of his recollection of conversations with Edward E. Hines in 1909 regarding the Illinois Senatorial situation.

Senator Penrose said that he first met Mr. Hines two years ago, when the lumber schedule in the Tariff bill was under consideration. Mr. Hines had presented letters of introduction. He saw Mr. Hines frequently, as the question of lumber was of much interest in Pennsylvania. He had talked with Mr. Hines about the Illinois Senatorship.

"As the situation developed," said Senator Penrose, "I expressed a natural interest in having some Republican elected. My first thought was to favor the re-election of Senator Hopkins, it being the natural impulse of one Senator to favor the re-election of a colleague with whom he has had personal and friendly relations. I think my first inquiries were as to whether the deadlock could be broken and Hopkins re-elected.

"As the deadlock continued, others were suggested, Lowden and Boutelle being mentioned. The Illinois Senatorship was a matter of general conversation but I do not specifically recall talking with any one else about it. Hines seemed to favor Boutelle in case Hopkins could not be elected. A couple of weeks later he told me he did not believe that a compromise could be effected on Boutelle.

"I think I talked with Boutelle on one occasion and told him that I would be glad to welcome him to the Senate. Not long after I had been told that Boutelle was not available. I was told the same of Lowden. Then a couple of days later Lorimer was suggested. I did not know Lorimer. I never had seen him. I never conversed with him until he entered the Senate. I had known of him as a member of the House and as a man of ability. I think that Hines told me Lorimer was the most available man under the circumstances, but that he was so wrapped up in a waterways project that it was doubtful whether he would consent to make the contest. My view was only the one natural to members of the Senate to have all the seats filled and I urged Hines, as a citizen of Chicago and of Illinois, to do all that he could to have a Republican elected."

In reply to a question as to when he next talked with Hines, Senator Penrose said:

"Not until after Lorimer was elected. He informed me that it had not been possible to bring about a union of political conditions."

Senator Penrose said that Hines had impressed him as being "a citizen who had the interest of the Republican Party and the American government at heart." He said that at first he had talked with Hines on the Illinois situation "only as he might have talked with a citizen of Colorado about a vacant Senatorship in that State."

"Did you take him to see Senator Aldrich?" Senator Penrose was asked.

"I may have done so," he said. "I probably did, and when there the Senatorship may have been discussed. I believe that Senator Aldrich felt much as I did about the matter."

"Was your interest due to the closeness of the vote in the Senate?"

"No; we wished to have a Senator elected to share in the arduous work. At that time every Senator had an enormous burden thrown on him. I always believed in having seats in the Senate filled. I was always in favor of accepting the appointee of a Governor when the Legislature failed to elect, as in the case of my late colleague, Senator Quay."

"In May, 1909, shortly before the election of Lorimer, when Hines was going to Chicago, was he authorized to speak for the Federal administration, Aldrich and yourself, for Lorimer?"

Senator Penrose said that he knew nothing except what he had heard of the administration's and Aldrich's interest, and he did not recall distinctly what he had then heard. There was too much else going on.

"I would have done all that I could, even to going out to Chicago to bring about Hopkins' election," said Senator Penrose. "He would have been particularly valuable in the Senate because of his experience.

"All sorts of people were coming to the Senate about tariff matters, many of them from Chicago, and it would have been extremely valuable to have had some one who knew who was who to tell us about them and what they represented. We had Senator Cullom on the Finance Committee, and his time was fully occupied, and he is not a young man. We needed all the help we could get.

"I became impressed with Mr. Hines as a man of ability, possessed of a great fund of information. He walked into my office in the light of day in the presence of one hundred people."

"During that time," interposed a member of the committee, "the work was the Tariff bill?"

"Yes," replied Senator Penrose, "and it was enough."

"Hines never impressed me as being a politician. I rather think that it was I who opened up the subject of the Senatorship with him. In other words, if the Senate had not been in session at the time, we would have had no conversation on the subject. Mr. Hines may have got the impression from me that the vote was needed, but my view was the broader one that every seat ought to be filled so that we might have all the help possible. We had the votes. He was interested in the lumber schedule but that schedule was stronger in both House and Senate than any other. We did not need another vote for it. Hines was president of the National Lumber Association, he was a business man and a citizen of Illinois and as such was interested as every man ought to be."

"In lumber of the Republican Party?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"I don't see why Mr. Hines' personal interests should get him into the contest," replied Senator Penrose. "He got into it, I suppose, because his fighting blood was aroused. The lumber tariff was safe."

When Senator Kenyon began to question Senator Penrose, the chairman of the committee, said in an aside to Senator Kenyon that a message had come that Senator Penrose was wanted in the Senate. Senator Penrose was in the midst of a sentence and remarked that he wished to continue.

Still Senator Kenyon continued questioning him until the chairman addressing Senator Penrose said:

"They want you in the Senate, Senator."

"I guess they can get along just as well," replied Senator Penrose amid laughter.

"You are excused." replied the chairman and the Senator left the stand.

RECORDER BROWN PRAISED.

The Tyrone Herald says: William H. Brown, recorder of Centre county, spent part of Wednesday in Tyrone on business. Mr. Brown is a candidate again this year for re-election, and it is claimed by many that he is one of the leading "horses" in the race. Brown has made a most efficient official and won hosts of friends while in office.

NOW INSULTS KIMPORT.

The "Democratic Watchman" says: "We trust that county chairman Kimport's recent visit to Harrisburg proved inspiration enough to lead him to get busy and organize or re-organize—which ever he prefers to call it—his committee in Centre County."

Had Kimpy voted the other way wouldn't the "Democratic Watchman" be praising him as the candy kid?

PERSONAL NOTES.

Democratic County Chairman Kimport spent the greater part of the week following the Harrisburg incident visiting with friends at Selinsgrove.

WOULD-BE GENERALS.

"The newspaper reports about the Harrisburg meeting of the Democrats indicate that we have an awful number of would-be generals for a very small army."—Democratic Watchman.

Having gone to Harrisburg to hold County Chairman Kimport in line and prevent his flopping into the Guthrie camp, it would appear that the "would-be generals" referred to by the "Democratic Watchman" included the Hon. P. Gray Meek, the Hon. Johnny Noll and the Hon. "Doc." White.

O, you Kimpy!

SPANKING KIMPORT.

The "Democratic Watchman" is now hurling bricks at the head of County Chairman Kimport—the same, identical Kimpy, whom the "Watchman" tried so hard to love for the sake of his vote at Harrisburg. Because he voted the other way, however, the "Watchman" proceeds to tell what it has all along really been thinking about Chairman Kimport. Listen to this from the "Watchman":

"Now that chairman Kimport has shown by his vote that he believes reorganization in the State is necessary—it is earnestly hoped that he will get about the business of organizing his own county in a way that he will at least have a county committee to help him do some of the much work that will have to be done this fall if the ticket that will be nominated in September is to win. It is the first time in over fifty years that the Democracy of the county has been left without a committee and no effort made on the part of the chairman for over a year to form or announce one. Really if reorganization is needed in any part of the State it would be hard to find a spot that needs it more, or needs it quicker, than right here at home, where Mr. Kimport was entrusted with that duty over one year ago. You have raised the Shiboleth of "reorganization," Mr. Kimport. You have voted for and cast your lot with men who say they "do not want harmony in the party." You have tried to bring the factional disputes that divides and distracts other counties in the State into our own, and if you purpose trying to save the integrity, the unity and the hopes of party workers in Centre county it is high time you get to work."

'Twould be interesting to hear Chairman Kimport tell how hard the "Watchman" tried to woo him before he went to Harrisburg. Possibly he lacks the nerve to tell.

Gave Friends a Surprise.

On Saturday evening, last, a well known young couple gave their friends there and elsewhere a complete surprise by driving to Lemont, where they were married by Rev. W. K. Harnish. The groom was William Sunday, a well-to-do young farmer, who is especially fortunate in securing as his bride and help-mate through life, Miss Mary R. Everts, a most charming young lady and a daughter of one of Pine Grove's most enterprising merchants. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Everts, of Pine Grove, and is popular with a large circle of friends. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Sunday, of Penna. Furnace. After the wedding ceremony the happy young couple drove to Oak Hall, where a splendid wedding supper awaited them. With their numerous friends we join in extending hearty congratulations and best wishes.

Mrs. E. H. Musser Buried.

Five children and 26 grand-children attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Emanuel H. Musser, who died at her late home at Aaronsburg, aged 69 years, 1 month and 12 days. The surviving children are Mrs. William Homan, of Scotland, South Dakota; Mrs. H. S. Winkelblech, of Fiedler; Mrs. William Winkelblech, and Mrs. Ceden Burd, of Coburn, and Clayton, of Aaronsburg. Mrs. Musser suffered from paralysis for eleven years or more, and during the last three years of her life she was a helpless invalid. She was held in high esteem by all who knew her and her death is sincerely mourned. She was a consistent and faithful member of the Lutheran church. The funeral services, which were held on Monday, at Aaronsburg, were conducted by her pastor, Rev. M. D. Geesey. Interment was made at Wolf's chapel.

Little Dr. Holmes.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson in speaking of Dr Holmes said:

"He was a very small man physically. Though one of the greatest physicians in the country and one of the greatest wits and writers, he had almost a boyish appearance. I remember when he returned to Harvard to attend a meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa he had a poem to recite, and he had to stand on a table so that all might see him.

"Dr. Holmes had studied in Paris—quite a remarkable thing in those days—and his services as a consultant in serious cases were always in demand. In one serious case the patient was a woman. As her own family physician entered the room with Dr. Holmes, who had been called in, the patient turned around in bed and said indignantly:

"'Doctor, why do you bring that boy into this room?' 'Why,' expostulated the family physician, 'that's Dr. Holmes!' 'He isn't a doctor,' answered the patient peevishly. 'Take him out!'

"And Dr. Holmes had to leave the room, much to his annoyance. Then the family physician got a chance to explain matters, and Dr. Holmes went in, but, as he confessed to me afterward, with very bad grace. He didn't like to be taken for a boy even by a very sick woman."—New York Tribune.

Seeing Your Own Brain.

In Professor Lloyd's work, "The End of the World," the experiment of seeing one's own brain is interesting. The experimenter, with a lighted candle, enters a perfectly dark room. He stands before a black curtain or wall, so that details cannot be seen by the candle's feeble light. The candle is moved laterally to and fro in front of the eyes, keeping it about six inches from the face and just below the tip of the nose. In a few minutes something, as if a thin mist, seems to grow before the eyes. It becomes more definite and gains outline, and then soon one may distinguish the venation and the division of the brain. The theory is that the moving light produces a counter irritation of the nerves that conduct the impression of sight to the brain. The current is reversed, and the brain is pictured on the retina. Then the impression returns through the nerves and affects the brain so that we see it.

Shepherd and Sheep.

A minister was once addressing a Sunday school. It was a Sunday school of little children, and the minister in his address desired to compare himself to a shepherd and his congregation to the shepherd's flocks.

"What are these beautiful animals?" he said, pointing to a drawing on the blackboard.

"Sheep, sheep!" chorused the children.

"And the cloaked figure in the foreground—what is he?"

"A shepherd!" the children cried.

"Exactly," agreed the minister, beaming with satisfaction. "And now, dear children, can you tell me what it is that the shepherd does for the sheep?"

A score of little mouths opened wide, and a score of treble voices cried shrilly:

"He shears 'em!"

Quaint Cures of Old.

For epilepsy wear a ring made from a coffin ring and take seven drops of blood from the tail of a cat. These remedies are equally efficacious either separately or in conjunction. For toothache carry in the pocket the tooth of a soldier killed in battle or eat mouse nibbled bread or trim your nails on a Friday. To cure warts, rub a potato and give the potato to a pig, or rub them with a piece of chalk, then put it in a little bag and throw it across crossroads. Holding the affected finger in the ear of a cat for half an hour was reckoned an excellent remedy for a felon.

Origin of the Word "Farm."

The origin of the word "farm" is as follows: In the Saxons' time the estates which the lords of manors granted to the freemen were at first but for a term of years, with a render of a rent, which in those days was of corn and other produce. The leases so made were called fermes or farmes, but times ensuing turned the produce into money and terms of years to terms of life and inheritance.—Westminster Gazette.

Hopeless.

"I refuse your hand, Mr. Squash," the young girl said coldly, "for two reasons."

"Name them!" Squash cried hopefully. "Name them, and perhaps—who knows"—

"They are," she interrupted, "yourself and another man."—Exchange.

Wide Awake.

Passerby—I thought you were blind.

Mendicant—Well, boss, times is so hard and competition is so great that even a blind man has to keep his eyes open nowadays if he wants to do any business at all.

Holding His Own.

"Stingy, isn't he?"

"You've said it. Why, he holds fast to everything he gets his clutches on and even bolts down his dinner!"

A Sticker.

Ella—He is always hanging around.

Stella—Yes; I don't believe you could lose him if he were an umbrella.—New York Press.

He that plants thorns must never expect to gather roses.—Pilpay.

Mrs. Shank and two grand-daughters, from Johnstown, are visiting with relatives here.

Mrs. Isaac Heaton and two children, from Gorton, and Mrs. Harry Sayers and family, from Snow Shoe, are spending some time at the John Croft home.

Try Liggetts Orangeade—at Green's.

Scotia.

Mrs. William Miller, of Tipton, and Miss Bertha Fraley, of Tyrone, spent several days last week at the home of the former's brother, Calvin Murtorff. They greatly enjoyed their visit, especially the huckleberry part of it.

Our advice to one of our young friends with pugilistic aspirations is to take a few more lessons in the manly art of self-defense before starting what the college boys call "rough-house," and he may have a different story to tell the next time.

On Saturday evening, August 5, the Methodist Episcopal church of this place will hold a big festival, at which all the delicacies of the season will be served. There will be plenty of music by the band. Everybody invited to come and have a good time, and while they are enjoying themselves they will also be helping a good cause along.

Our baseball club on Saturday went over to State College and when they returned they had the College boys' scalps hanging to their belt. This is the third game they have taken from State College this season. We are not blowing our horn too loudly, but they will have to practice up a little over at State College, for in our present trim they are dead easy.

A. C. Thomas, of Waddle, had a carload of specially prepared hog-feed shipped here from Virginia on Monday. He had no trouble in disposing of it, almost everybody who keeps hogs taking from five hundred to a ton of it. At that it is better and cheaper than chop, so the Virginia people say, but it will be some time before the Scotia people will say their say.

On Saturday Miss Anna Delige received a message from Washington, D. C., that her niece, Anna Miller, had died on that day in one of the hospitals of that city and that the body would be sent here for burial. This is where she was born and she always called Scotia her home. She was a daughter of the late Albert Miller and is survived by two sisters, one in Altoona and the other in Lock Haven.

Chester Young and wife, with grandmother Harrington as chaperon, we suppose, enjoyed an early-morning drive on Sunday to Chester's home, at Port Matilda. Of course, Chester wanted to see his mother, but the trip was more for the benefit of the new boy, since Port Matilda friends had never seen the young man. He reports that his friends on the other side of the mountains were glad to see the young American, especially Chester's brother, after whom the baby is named.

William Young and his bride returned on Thursday from their wedding tour and that evening the tin-pan band gave them an old-fashioned country serenade. William came down handsomely with the cigars for the men and boys and candy and oranges for the ladies and the girls. He said it was the first time he was ever serenaded and that he hoped it would be the last time. Father-in-law Laufer said that he had several more girls, and that he of course expected many more weddings. And then, with a chuckle, he added that on each occasion he would do as he had done on this—get out with the boys and have a good time.

Mt. Eagle.

Miss Bertha Butler, of Philadelphia, is the guest of Miss Florence Leathers.

John Glenn and sisters, of near Curtin, were recent callers at the J. B. Leathers home.

Thad Yearick on Tuesday loaded a car of nice lumber for shipment to Williamsport.

Two or three gangs of track-men were busy laying railroad rails through here on Friday, last.

Earl Leathers, the handle factory man, transacted business in the County Seat a day or two ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William Rhoads and family, of Pitcairn, spent a few days with the former's brother-in-law, T. J. Leathers.

Stella McCormick, who has been enjoying an excursion trip to Niagara Falls, stopped off here to see her aunt, Mrs. J. R. Pheasant.

Aunt Martha Packer and her son, Clyde, and his wife, and also Grandma Leathers enjoyed a drive over to Penn's cave on Tuesday.

Frank Deitz and several others spent a few days in the Allegheny mountains, returning home with a fine lot of huckleberries. They report the huckleberries as not very plentiful in the section they visited.

Mrs. Phoebe Long and daughter, Florence, from Sunbury, and Mrs. Kate Snyder and daughter, Mabel, from Indiana, are spending a few days at the home of their aunt, Mrs. J. B. Leathers. Mrs. Long and Mrs. Snyder are daughters of the late Daniel Leathers.

Woodward.

Maud Ard departed for Philadelphia this week.

Maude Zern, from Erie, is a guest at the Dr. W. P. Ard home.

Preaching services and Sunday school in both churches on Sunday forenoon, next.

Miss Elizabeth Guisewite, from Philadelphia, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Daniel Stover.

Miss Grace Boob, from Mifflinburg, spent last week with relatives in town, returning home on Monday.

D. J. Benner, wife and daughter, Florence, and James Guisewite attended services at St. Paul on Sunday, last.

George Fultz, wife and child, and Mrs H. A. Kissinger and daughter, from Nittany, spent Saturday and Sunday at the Jacob Fultz home.

F. E. Wieland, wife and daughters, Edwinna and Mildred, from Linden Hall, and Bernard Lemon, from Morgantown, West Virginia, were visitors on Sunday at the R. M. Wolfe home, the trip being made in the Wieland automobile.

After spending a week with their parents, Willet Hosterman and son, Oliver Hosterman and family and Charles Hosterman and family, from Buffalo, and Wesley Hosterman and wife, from Johnstown, returned to their respective homes during the early part of the week.

Unionville.

Hughes Barton is back on the railroad, working for P. J. McDonnell.

Boyd Stere was called to Tyrone to brake on the Tyrone division.

Lewis Biddle, who is employed at State College, spent Sunday at the home of his parents at this place.

Quinter Underwood departed last week for San Francisco, California, where he expects to be stationed for the next two years.

On last Saturday the election was held to vote for or against water. The vote stood 40 to 23. For full particulars see article on first page of this issue of "The Republican."

Roy Miles and family, of Pitcairn, are visiting their numerous friends here. Mr. Miles was recently operated on for appendicitis in the Bellefonte hospital and is getting along very nicely.

Miss Martha Eastman, of Tampa, Florida, is visiting at the home of her uncle, Harvey Hoover, on Dix Run. Isabel and Mildred Esterline, of Cleveland, Ohio, are spending the summer very enjoyably at the Hoover home.

On Friday of last week the 10-years-old child of Edward Spicer, on Dix Run, met with a very serious accident while riding with his father on a load of rails. The child was jolted off the wagon and the hind wheel passed over his head, cutting the scalp almost from ear to ear. The child was removed to the Bellefonte hospital on Friday evening, where 23 stitches were required to dress the wound. Although not yet out of danger, the child is getting along as well as could be expected.

Blanchard.

Veterinarian Oldring, of Howard, was a visitor in this section a few days ago, having been summoned to take care of a very sick horse belonging to John James. The medicine must have been the right kind, for the horse recovered.

Farmer Jacob Bechdel is minus $2.50, the result of one of his calves straying from the mountains, where it had been in pasture. He found the calf at Cato, but had to pay 25 cents a day for each day it had been in the finder's possession, or $2.50 all told.

Morris Shilling, a son of Thomas Shilling, will shortly submit to an operation in the Lock Haven hospital which, it is believed and confidently hoped, will result in the healing of an old wound on his leg. About ten years ago he was kicked by a horse and a bone in his leg fractured. The wound never fully healed and it was finally decided to have an operation. By scraping the bone it is believed that the wound may be permanently cured.

Smullton.

Jacob Walizer is conducting a boarding house.

Rev. Luther Miller and family are spending some time at home.

The Reformed Young People's Society will hold a basket picnic in D. D. Royer's grove on Saturday, next.

Camp Meeting August 10-22.

The thirty-ninth annual camp-meeting at Newton Hamilton will be held this year, from August 10 to August 22. The camp-meeting grounds are now open and will not be closed until September 1.

Father and Son Drowned.

W. L. Cooper, of Bedford, superintendent of the Bedford division, Pennsylvania Railroad, and his son, Wilfred, were drowned in the Susquehanna river, near Columbia, on Saturday of last week. A canoe in which they were making a pleasure trip struck a rock and both occupants were drowned, their bodies sinking to the bottom of the river before help could reach the scene of the accident. They were enroute from Harrisburg to Peques, a camping site near Lancaster, and at which point Mr. Cooper's wife and daughter were waiting. The son's body was recovered on Monday. It was necessary to explode dynamite to bring Mr. Cooper's body to the surface and it was not recovered until Tuesday. The Coopers some years ago resided at Tyrone.

Seven Bells.

Everybody who knows anything about nautical matters understands the method of keeping time at sea—eight bells every four hours. From 6 to 8 in the evening is the second dogwatch, but on British ships seven bells (half past 7) of the second dogwatch are never struck. All other ships, even the American, strike these bells. During the Napoleonic wars there was a great mutiny in the British navy. The crews of the fleets lying at Spithead and the Nore agreed to rise simultaneously against their officers. The signal agreed upon was seven bells of the second dogwatch. The mutiny actually began at the arranged time, but failed, the ringleaders being executed. Ever since then seven bells of the second dogwatch has never been struck on British ships, naval or mercantile.

Ways of the Labrador Indians.

The Labrador Indians when on a hunt stalk on in advance of the train with their arms, while the women, heavily laden with provisions and means of shelter, drag along slowly after. When the lords and masters begin to think of food time or wish in any way to leave some guide as to their progress for the squaws they thrust an upright spear or stick in the snow and draw in the snow the exact line of the shadow then cast. The women, toiling painfully along, note the spear and the progress of the shadow and know closely the difference of time. They know, too, whether they dare to linger for a few minutes' rest or if they must hastily catch the stick or spear and hurry on

Belinda's Orphan

She Brought Happiness to a Lonely Home

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"No, I don't want no orphan," said Miss Belinda, with a decisive shake of her head. "I've got my hands full now with chickens and young turkeys coming on and bees and currant bushes without bothering with a high flying youngster that'll scare the chicks and get stung by the bees, although they're warranted stingless, mind you, and to trample on my berry bushes. No, ma'am—no orphans for me!" This time Miss Belinda's lips clicked together with a little sound of finality.

"I'm sorry, Belinda, because the home is jest about running over with 'em. I was telling the matron this morning that I knew there were plenty of folks in Little River who could give a good home to some of those youngsters if they wasn't so mean and stingy. Of course I don't mean you," added the local member of the visiting committee of the Riverview Orphans' home. "But sometimes when I think of all the spare beds, all made up clean and white, in the empty homes around here it makes my blood bile to look upon them poor orphans so crowded for room that Mrs. Hill says they'll have to sleep in rows crosswise of the beds pretty soon."

"I want to know!" ejaculated Belinda, with a startled glance at Emeline Brown. "I think you better stick to the truth, Emeline, and not exaggerate. Now, honest and true, how many orphans too many have they got up there?"

"Ten," replied Mrs. Brown flatly.

"Humph!" snorted Belinda.

In and out of the scarlet wool went her big wooden knitting needles as she rapidly constructed a shawl to comfort some shivering shoulders when the summer was over. Mrs. Brown watched her neighbor expectantly. With a family of seven sons and daughters under her own rooftree she was safe in the condemnation of the uncrowded homes of Little River. Here was Belinda Downs, now a handsome, well preserved spinster of forty-two, of independent means, possessing a snug home, a tiny income sufficient for her modest wants, a little shaggy pony and a rusty phaeton to carry her about the countryside. There was neither man, woman nor child to call upon Belinda for service, for she was without relatives, having outlived them all.

"I should think this was just the place for an orphan to be happy in," suggested Mrs. Brown, throwing an admiring glance around the small domain where orchard and garden were green and thrifty in spring bloom.

"I've got orphans enough as it is," snapped Belinda shortly.

Mrs. Brown smiled as she saw the fatherless and motherless strays which the lonely woman had gathered about her. There was a lame duck which Belinda had rescued after a hunter had brought it down with a glancing shot; a carrier pigeon which had dropped exhausted on her doorstep; a mongrel dog of many colors which had been faithfully scrubbed by Miss Belinda and was now much cleaner if not happier than in his soiled state; there was also a fine collection of homeless cats. Indeed, Miss Belinda's place might have been another orphanage, so thickly was it populated with waifs.

"Would you rather have a boy or a girl?" asked Mrs. Brown craftily. But Miss Belinda was not to be caught that way.

"I'd rather have a cat," she said.

"You ought to be ashamed, Belinda Downs, the way you do talk! If you could see them poor young ones looking so wistful every time a visitor comes, hoping it's somebody to offer a home, you'd harness up Dolly this very instant and go and fetch one away."

"Might as well bring two while I was about it," remarked Miss Belinda ironically. "I've heard it said that it's cheaper for two to live than one. Ain't you heard that?"

"No, indeed. If that's the case, nine people ought to live for nothing, and I know we don't do that." Mrs. Brown jerked on her sunbonnet, shrugged her fat shoulders and without another word waddled down the path that led to the gate between the two places.

"Take an orphan, indeed!" sniffed Belinda for the hundredth time since the Riverview home had been erected. "Humph!" she ejaculated, also for the hundredth time.

Nevertheless, as soon as dinner was over Belinda did harness up shaggy little Dolly, and, climbing into the phaeton and holding the lines very high in her mitted hands, she drove through the pine woods down to the Riverview home.

"I'd like to look at some orphans," said Belinda to the matron when she was seated in the darkened parlor of the home. "What kind have you?" she added, just as if orphans were vegetables or fruit in the market.

Mrs. Hill smiled in spite of the summer heat that nearly overpowered her bulk of flesh. "We have all kinds, even if we haven't got all colors," she said.

Thereupon there ensued a period of trying ordeals for tender hearted Belinda Downs.

Black hair and brown, red hair and tow, flaxen and pure gold all passed in review, and when it was all over there remained in the parlor a soft, round faced damsel of five years, with a soft mop of golden brown hair and a pair of eyes like brown velvet pansies lashed thickly with black. Belinda's heart was thumping rapidly while she interviewed the little girl for the last moment before giving her decision. The child was shy and gave timid, breathless little whispering answers, and Belinda loved her the more.

"Her name is Bessie Carson. Her mother died in the city hospital last March, and their records say that the child's father is dead. You can keep her for awhile, and if you are satisfied you can take out full papers of adoption if you wish to, Miss Brown."

"I guess I'll want to do that," said Miss Belinda as she arose to go. "When will Bessie be ready?" she asked, with a delightful sense of ownership in the dainty morsel of babyhood before her.

"This afternoon," said Mrs. Hill. "You won't find her much trouble. She's a quiet little thing and speaks of her mother and the little baby that died, and, strangely enough, she asks for her father. Where's your father, Bessie, dear?" asked the matron, bending down.

"He'll be back in a little while," said Bessie, running to the window. "I guess I better look for him, hadn't I?"

"Quaint, isn't she?" whispered Mrs. Hill as she let Miss Belinda out.

"Very nice little girl," said Miss Belinda, trying to keep the happy sparkles out of her eyes, for it did not seem right to grasp so much happiness as was promised in the possession of little Bessie Carson. "I'll drive down after Bessie just before supper."

All the rest of the day she was very busy preparing for her orphan visitor. There was a small bed to drag down from the attic and place beside her own, and it had to be made up with all the miniature bedclothing which she had used as a child. There were old fashioned dolls and other toys to be resurrected from hair trunks and brushed and reburnished, and there was a batch of delicious ginger cookies to be made so that she might fashion a dozen gingerbread men and elephants with currant eyes for the delectation of little Bessie.

At last when all was in readiness and the little girl had been happily transferred to the phaeton and allowed to drive the gentle pony home there was never such unalloyed bliss as shone in the faces of Miss Belinda and her little orphan. The child loved Miss Belinda and clung to her with affection when she had a chance, and Miss Belinda was almost ashamed of the opportunities she afforded Bessie for showing her affection.

"It certainly can't harm anybody to enjoy being loved," protested Miss Belinda to her sterner self as she brushed away a tear.

"Is you crying, Miss Linda?" asked Bessie wistfully.

"Just a teenty bit, dear, because you love me so much," smiled Belinda, bending to kiss her charge.

"I smile when you love me," confided Bessie. "It makes me feel so good here." She placed a tiny hand on her heart. Miss Belinda kissed her again.

That happened after Bessie had been there three months. The adoption papers had all been made out and filed and Bessie Carson had become Bessie Downs when one afternoon the gate latch clicked sharply, and a tall man strode up the path and looked strangely down at little Bessie playing with her dolls at Miss Belinda's feet.

From her chair on the veranda Miss Belinda arose with a sinking feeling at her heart. This man was not from the home, although there was a strange familiarity in his tall, lean figure, his tanned cheeks, with the firm, beardless lips and chin. He did not look at Miss Belinda, but he pushed back his hat and held out his hands to little Bessie.

"Bess! Darling little Bess! Don't you know daddy?" he asked hoarsely.

With a startled cry the child looked at him earnestly and then ran straight to his arms with the unfailing instinct of the child for its parent.

Then the man looked up and saw Miss Belinda standing, white and shaking, before him. "I'm sorry, ma'am, but it's my little girl, and—Mercy! Linda Downs, what are you doing here with my Bessie?"

In the long, cool twilight there was time to relate how James Stearns had married the girl he had been engaged to when Belinda Downs met him in the west so many years ago and they had both fallen in love in spite of his previous engagement, but he had been true to his promise and married the girl who had been Bessie's mother; how one of the devastating floods of the west had separated the little family for months, and at last the wife and child had gone east in the hope of finding some of Mrs. Stearns' relatives. She had been taken ill in New York, registered by mistake under the name of Carson, had died and left the homeless little Bessie to the care of stranger hands.

In the meantime the distracted father had been hunting high and low for his family. He had traced them to New York, had proof of his wife's death and now had come to Little River to find that an all wise Providence had brought his little daughter into the empty, longing arms of the one woman in the world who could be his wife now.

When Emeline Brown heard of it she chuckled audibly. "Don't never sniff at orphans again, Belinda Downs," she admonished the bride. "You're under a debt of gratitude to me for pressing of you to take one."

But Belinda and her orphan—orphaned no longer—smiled contentedly at the man they both loved best in the world.

The Norman's Coronation.

A peculiar incident happened at the crowning of William the Conqueror. After the coronation oath, in which the new monarch promised to protect the church and to execute judgment and mercy, the archbishop put the question to the assembled crowd, "Will ye have this prince to be your king?"

A clamorous response of assent startled the Norman garrison. They believed the English had revolted and took up their swords and torches. They set fire to the house, the flames spread, and there was a general alarm.

The English, hearing of the plunder, rushed out of church. The bishops and clergy who remained were in such confusion that they could hardly go through with the act of crowning. William heard the tumult, but could not conjecture the cause and sat trembling at the foot of the altar. No great mischief was done by the fire, but the occurrence laid the foundation of a long enmity between the English and Normans.

The Shakespearean Sonnets.

There are many excellent reasons for thinking that Shakespeare did not write all of the sonnets that have come down to us associated with his name. It is a fact that he never published them, never claimed their authorship, never acknowledged them, and never, so far as can be ascertained, gave his consent or authority to have them published in his name. Some of the sonnets imply in their author certain physical defects, pecuniary embarrassments and other things which could not have applied to Shakespeare, but which might very well have fitted Marlowe, or William Herbert, or Henry Wriothesley, or any one of a half dozen other young men in Shakespeare's circle. It is as good as settled that several, if not many, of the sonnets were written by other hands than those of the author of "Hamlet" and "King Lear," though, of course, the task of naming the real authors is an impossible one.—New York American.

Smoky Achill.

One of the smokiest places on earth is undoubtedly Achill, off the coast of Mayo, Ireland. A smoky atmosphere is not an unknown thing in any Irish cabin, but in Achill the greater the smoke the higher the satisfaction of the natives, for there smoke means potatoes, and potatoes mean food. It is to one of the methods of procuring soot that the islander owes the smoky condition of his cabin. Soot he must have or the potatoes will not grow. In the tilled fields he erects little huts, called "scrawbogues," formed by "scraws," or sods, of heather from the mountains. Within these huts he keeps a fire of peat burning for six weeks or two months, at the end of which period the scraws are, from their continual impregnation with smoke, transformed into soot. Turf or peat is abundant on the island, and the large fires cost nothing.—Harper's Weekly.

Diana of Ephesus.

Ephesus was one of the twelve Ionic cities of Asia Minor and was situated in Lydia, near the mouth of the river Caystrus. According to Strabo, it was founded by Androcius, son of Codrus. It ultimately came into possession of the Romans, and in the time of Augustus it was the greatest place of trade of all the cities of Asia west of the Taurus. St. Paul resided there three years, but the destruction of its great temple by the Goths in 260 A. D. gave it a blow from which it never recovered. This was the famous temple of Diana. Near the western extremity of the town are still to be seen some massive structures, which have since 1868 been carefully excavated. It is now certain that these stand on the famous temple site.

A Famous Windmill.

Nantucket possesses what is believed to be the oldest windmill for grinding grain in actual operation in America. Nathan Wilbur, a Nantucket sailor, who had seen the busy windmills of Holland as he sailed abroad, built it out of timbers of wrecked ships in 1746. There has never been a day in all the 165 years since that time when the mill has not been busy. There is always a wind to turn its outstretched wings.

What He Would Pay to Hear.

"Clemens," said a friend to Mark Twain some years ago, "wouldn't you like to go and hear Ingersoll on Moses this evening?"

"No," replied the humorist; "I wouldn't give 10 cents to hear Ingersoll on Moses, but I would give $10 to hear Moses on Ingersoll."

Variety In Punishment.

It was one of the vagaries of medieval law that various local courts executed their will on prisoners without interference from the higher courts, says "The Customs of Old England." They exhibited considerable ingenuity in the treatment of prisoners. Here is a case at Liverpool in October, 1565: "One Thomas Johnson had been apprehended for picking purses. Apparently he underwent no regular trial, but was dealt with summarily, the program being as follows: First he was imprisoned several days and nights, and then he was nailed by the ear to a post at the flesh shambles. As the next item he was turned out naked from the middle upward, and many boys with withy rods whipped him out of the town. He was then locked to a clog with an iron chain and horse block until the Friday morning following and finally abjured the town before the mayor and bailiffs, at the same time making restitution of 6s. 8d. to the wife of one Henry Myln."

Guile of the Drongo Cuckoo.

The drongo shrike is a bird of pugnacious disposition, especially at the nesting season, when it guards its nest with, for a small bird, great ferocity. Douglas Dewar, from whom this account is taken, says that he has watched a pair of these little birds attack and drive away a monkey which tried to climb into the tree in which their nest was placed. Indeed, so able a fighter is the shrike that some other birds, notably orioles and doves, frequently build their nests in the same tree in order to share the benefit of his prowess. The drongo cuckoo lays its eggs in the nests of such birds as the king crow. These are pugnacious, even ferocious, and without some guile a cuckoo could not accomplish this feat. But the drongo cuckoo is so like the drongo shrike, even having the same odd twist to its tail feathers, that the king crow is deceived by the resemblance and hesitates to give fight to what she takes to be one of the pugnacious shrikes.—New York World.

A Joke on Her Neighbor.

A queer old woman had a horse which was the pest of the neighborhood. It especially delighted in grazing on a certain neighbor's lawn. This was a great annoyance to him; but, not wishing to have any trouble, he decided to buy the old horse. He made the woman an offer of $10 for the old animal, which she declined. About two weeks later she came to her neighbor one day and told him she was very sorry to part with the horse, but as she was in need of a little money she had decided to accept his offer. The neighbor said, "Very well," and, drawing out his purse, handed her $10. She thanked him profusely and started to leave when the man bethought himself and said, "Where shall I send to get the horse, madam?"

"Oh, he is dead down yonder in the canyon," the woman calmly replied and marched on out.

The Judge's Whistle.

The most concise summing up on record is attributed in a volume of legal reminiscences called "Pie Powder" to Baron Bramwell. The defendant's counsel had closed his case without calling a witness whose coming had been much expected. "Don't you call Jones, Mr. Blank?" said the judge significantly at the close of counsel's address. "I do not, my lord," replied the advocate. The judge turned around to the jury and gave vent to a low and prolonged whistle. "Whe-e-ew!" he said, or, rather, whistled. "Gentlemen, consider your verdict."

His Sudden Call.

The Masons of Manhattan gave a banquet. The toastmaster called upon one brother whose name was not on the program. It rather confused him.

"Look here, Mr. Toastmaster," said he, "this isn't exactly fair. You have called upon me to make an ass of myself without any preparation whatever."—Kansas City Journal.

According to Rule.

"How is your mother this morning?" asked Mrs. Grey of the small boy who came with the milk.

"She's better," he answered.

"Can she sit up?" went on Mrs. Grey.

"No," answered the literal youngster. "She sits down, but she stands up."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Lubricator.

"Why do you always put a pitcher of water and a glass on the table before an orator?"

"That," said the chairman of many reception committees, "is to give him something to do in case he forgets his piece and has to stop and think."—Washington Star.

Art in Bowing.

To know how to make a proper bow is a very desirable accomplishment. Young men who have not been carefully trained to do this in childhood should remedy the defect by giving the subject proper study and attention. We should advise a man who is decidedly awkward to take a few lessons from a teacher of physical training, or from a dancing master. While he will not want to copy exactly the bow of the latter, he will learn from him the principles which should govern one's motions.

If a man does not wish to go to this expense, let him study the salutations of the best-bred men and women of his acquaintance. Some people have the art of making a bow that is at once graceful, even courtly, yet dignified. They understand that we should greet others in a way to show both respect to them and respect for ourselves. A bow should always be civil, but not servile. It should never betray haughtiness and arrogance.

A quick familiar nod of the head is only permissible between intimates, or between young people of the same age. The chin should never be protruded, since this always looks aggressive, neither should the shoulders be squared back after the fashion of the prize-fighter. In making a bow, the head should always be bent; additional respect is shown by bending forward slightly from the waist. To bow slowly is at once more graceful and more respectful. Some young men have a way of holding head and shoulders back, and suddenly bending forward in this stiff fashion from the waist. The result is extremely ugly, and looks almost defiant.

A man should always raise his hat (the expression "tipping it" is objectionable,) when bowing to a girl or woman, or clergyman, an older man, to his employer or to a person occupying high official or social position.

If he is in the company of a lady and she bows either to a man or a woman he lifts his hat, as a mark of respect to his companion and her friends. He does the same thing if he meets an acquaintance who has a lady with him, or if he is with a man who bows to any one walking or driving with ladies. A man raises his hat when taking leave of a woman. He must not forget to pay this little courteous attention to his mother and sisters.

If he has occasion to speak to a stranger, as, for instance, to call her attention to a parcel that she has dropped, or to offer her his seat in a trolley or railway car, he should always lift his hat, as a preface to his remarks. If he does this, and addresses her as madam, speaking always in a formal manner, there is little danger of his being mistaken for a person who means to be rude. As a rule, gentlemen remove their hats in an elevator where there are ladies. In the lifts of office or other buildings in business districts, this rule is often disregarded, we regret to say. It is very little trouble to pay this small courteous attention to women. American men are for the most part, truly chivalrous in the best sense of the word. But they sometimes do themselves injustice by neglecting the little acts of courtesy and deference which women greatly appreciate.

Thus a man should always raise his hat when introduced to a woman. He takes it off if he is talking to her at the door of her carriage or motorcar, or elsewhere in the street. She should ask him to put it on again, but if she omits to do so, he may resume it, with a few words or a gesture of apology.

Men who are punctilious in these matters raise their hats if a lady who is a stranger makes some inquiry of them, or if they pass her in some narrow way, as on a staircase. They do the same thing if obliged to go in front of her in a railway train—as, for instance, where the man occupies the inner seat. A man usually sits in the outer one, allowing the lady to take the inside seat, but in extremely cold weather, when the place next the window is very undesirable.

In America it is the privilege of the lady to bow first. On the continent of Europe the gentleman does so, the theory being that he thus pays his respects to her and she returns the greeting or not, as she pleases.

It is extremely rude to "cut" any one, and we must not too readily imagine that people fail to recognize us of set purpose. Many persons are extremely absent-minded, others are near-sighted, and others again, have a poor memory for faces. Hence we must exercise a little charity and not take offense at the first opportunity. When we do bow it is well to do so in a decided way, so that there may be no mistake about it.

Annually Asked.

"Well, Hawkins, old man," said Witherbee, "has your wife decided where she will spend the summer?"

"Yep," said Hawkins. "She's going abroad."

"So? And how about you?"

"Well, I don't know yet," sighed Hawkins. "I haven't decided whether to stay in town or go into bankruptcy."

Must Observe Noon Hour.

Chief Factory Inspector John C. Delaney has issued notices to all deputy factory inspectors informing them that they must enforce the acts fixing the period of time allowed for the noon day meal in the industrial establishments of the state. In his notice Chief Delaney says:

"The act of 1905 provides one hour for the noonday meal, which may, for good cause, be reduced to less than one hour. The act of 1909 fixes forty-five minutes as the minimum period for the noonday meal for males under sixteen and females under eighteen years of age. In enforcing these acts you will hereafter proceed as follows: In establishments where no males under sixteen years, and no females under eighteen years of age are employed you may, for good cause, allow thirty minutes, but in establishment where males under sixteen and females under eighteen years are employed not less than forty-five minutes must be permitted for the noonday meal."

Washing Dishes.

Children usually dislike to wash dishes and get out of doing it wherever possible.

Did you ever wonder at the reason for their distaste? Might it not possibly be at least remotely connected with the absence of attractive conveinences for doing the work?

If you will provide plenty of nice clean dish-towels, a clean dish-cloth or a dish-mop, and plenty of hot water, and will in addition require that the refuse food be neatly scraped from the plates and the residue from cups, etc., be thrown into the sink or slop pail instead of into the dishwater, depend upon it washing dishes would not be the hated task it so often is. Then, teach the children to take pride in having the glass sparkle and the silver shine. The work we do and do well should be and almost always is a joy to us.

She Got it.

An old lady called on a lawyer in San Francisco to ask him to have the United States government grant her a pension. She told a sad story of her destitution, and added a glowing account of the heroism her husband had displayed in the civil war.

"As I understand it," said the pension attorney, "you ask for this pension in the name of the valiant services rendered to your country by your husband."

"No," replied the old lady. "I ask it in the name of God and His mercy."

"In that case," said the lawyer, "I'll get you your pension. I have very few applications in that name"

"I envy you," says the very thin man. "I wish I had your weight. Here I am, a skinny, dyspeptic creature, suffering half the time with stomachache!"

Saw His Chance.

When all Westchester county was thrilling with the prospect of a railroad competition an agent of the new company that was to build went through Pelham Manor buying property for the right of way. He rang the doorbell of one resident, who was living in a rented house at $50 a month.

"Will you take $6,000 for this house?" demanded the agent.

"Oh, no, I couldn't," stammered the tenant.

"Will you take $8,000?"

"I couldn't do it."

"Well, think it over."

Mr. Tenant foxily runs around to the owner of the property and gets an agreement to sell him the property for $6,000 if he can raise the money. The railroad's agent returns.

"Will you take $9,000?"

"No."

"Ten?"

"Yes."

"Done!"

Oh, yes, there is such a thing as luck when a man has the wits to see it coming his way.—New York Press.

Killing an Unfaithful Lover.

When a Japanese girl has been slighted by her lover she revenges herself according to the following quaint custom: In the dawn of the early morning she rises and puts on a white robe and white clogs. Round her neck she hangs a small mirror, which falls to her breast, and on her head she puts a metal crown with three points, each point bearing a lighted candle. In her left hand she carries a small figure of straw or rags—supposed to represent her unfaithful lover—and this she nails to one of the sacred trees surrounding the family shrine. She then prays for the death of the man, vowing that if this comes to pass she will pull out the nails which are hurting the sacred tree and make offerings to comfort her family god. Every night she comes to the shrine, strikes in two more nails and makes the same prayer, her idea being that the god, to save his tree from further injury, will kill her lover.

A Strange Species of Deer.

Just above the buffet in the dining room of a Richmond house there hangs a huge, finely mounted antlered head. This trophy of the owner's hunting prowess is fastened so firmly to the wall that the glistening neck seems to be coming right out through the plaster. When a little boy from the city saw this decoration for the first time he eyed it with considerable curiosity and very evident uneasiness. It looked almost too lifelike for comfort. Finally the youngster asked to be excused and slipped from his chair, going into the next room. He returned to the dining room flushed with embarrassment.

"What's the matter, Harry?" asked his host.

"I wanted to see," explained the child sheepishly, "if that animal's legs were really as long as that or if he were standing on something in the next room."—Lippincott's.

A Clear Case.

The beautiful young prisoner entered the box in her own behalf.

"What is your age, miss?" asked the lawyer.

"Forty-eight," was the steady reply.

The feminine jury caught its breath with an audible little gasp and sat there rigid.

"How much did you pay for the hat you are wearing?"

"Ninety-eight cents."

"Are you guilty of the crime that is charged against you?"

"No."

Thus did the wily prisoner attempt to establish her veracity and then convince the jury that she was innocent. But don't forget that this was a jury of women. A verdict of incurable insanity was brought in.—New York Journal.

"Yarbs" We Have Known.

What has become of the elderly lady who in the seventies and earlier always referred to an "herb" as a "yarb?" The word has gone out of use. About the meanest "yarb" was a bitter weed named "thoroughwort." Then there was cammermile, dockroot and dandelion, in their miserable partnership, lobelia and catnip. These things were "steeped," and you took them or had them thrust upon you "for your blood."—Minneapolis Journal.

Nearly a Joke.

The humorist was in a brown study. "I'll get it yet," he muttered.

"What's the matter, dear?" his wife inquired. "You seem to be puzzled about something."

"Yes," the jokesmith replied. "I'm trying to make a 'stitch in time' joke about the girl who is darning the clocks in her stockings."

Useless Sacrifice.

Duncan had eaten, with symptoms of pleasure, his first shrimp, but the mushroom that followed it proved less to his liking.

"Mother," he said, pushing the partly eaten agaric to the far edge of his plate, "I wish they hadn't killed that one."—Youth's Companion.

No Crown For Him.

Sunday School Teacher—If you are a good boy, Willie, you will go to heaven and have a gold crown on your head. Willie—Not for mine, then. I had one of them things put on a tooth once.—Exchange.

Not Much Resistance.

"Did the prisoner offer any resistance?"

"Only a shilling, your wurshup, and I wouldn't take it."

Get a Box of

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

Otherwise Backache
May get the best of you

Nothing disturbs the human system more than pain whether it be in the form of headache, backache, neuralgia, stomachache or the pains peculiar to women. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are a standard remedy for pain, and are praised by a great army of men and women who have used them for years.

"A friend was down with LaGrippe and nearly crazed with awful backache. I gave her one Anti-Pain Pill and left another for her to take. They helped her right away, and she says she will never be without them again."

Honest Medicines Versus Fakes.

President Taft's message suggesting an amendment to the Pure Food and Drugs law in its relation to Prepared Medicines, does not refer to such standard medicines as Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and Foley Kidney Pills, both of which are true medicines carefully compounded of ingredients whose medicinal qualities are recognized by the medical profession itself as the best known remedial agents for the diseases they intended to counteract. For over three decades Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been a standard remedy for coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs for children and for grown persons, and it retains today its pre-eminence above all other preparations of its kind. Foley Kidney Pills are equally effective and meritorious. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Wash That Itch Away.

It is said that there are certain springs in Europe that give relief and cure to Eczema and other skin diseases. If you knew that by washing in these waters you could be relieved from that awful itch, wouldn't you make every effort to take a trip to Europe at once? Would not be willing to spend your last cent to find the cure?

But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town!

A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child.

If you have not already tried it, get at least a 25 cent bottle today. We assure you of instant relief.

Called Back.

"A good wife is heaven's greatest gift to man and the rarest gem the earth holds," remarked Mr. Jarphly the other evening. "She is his joy, his inspiration, and his very soul. Through her he learns to reach the pure and true, and her loving hands lead him softly over the rough places. She is——"

"Jeremiah," said Mrs. Jarphly solemnly. "Jeremiah, what wickedness have you been up to now?"

Mrs. Howard Gearhart, of Newark, N. J., nee Miss Mame Fox, of this place, arrived in Bellefonte on Saturday evening and will visit here for some time.

Mrs. Charles K. Rath, who had been visiting for two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Crider, departed on Monday for her home in Elizabeth, N. J.

Frederick Calderwood Kurtz is the name of the new associate editor of the "Centre Democrat," born recently at the Bellefonte hospital and now doing right well, thank you.

Samuel A. Miller, the best looking man employed at the Bush House, has joined the ranks of readers of "The Republican," his name having been entered as a subscriber a day or two ago.

While her husband, Lieutenant William H. Brown, is on duty with Company L, at Selinsgrove, Mrs. Brown and little daughter, Mildred, are visiting at Waynesboro. They will remain there several weeks.

Harry J. Goss, for a time a popular resident of Bellefonte but now located in Williamsport, where he is one of the right hand men with the Keeler Motor Company, last week joined Mrs. Goss on a visit to his parents in Philipsburg.

Mrs. Rebie Garman Cruse returned home on Saturday evening from Williamsport, where she visited with the Maitlands and also the C. M. Garman family. Mr. Garman has been quite ill but he is somewhat improved at the present writing.

Harry M. Stere, one of the progressive firm of J. C. Stere & Sons, at Unionville, was a visitor to Bellefonte on Monday. Harry's mission in town was anything but a pleasant one. When he returned home late in the afternoon he left behind several large teeth which had been giving him trouble for some time.

County Commissioners Woodring and Dunlap yesterday inspected the inter-county bridge over the west branch of the Susquehanna river, at Karthaus, which had been reported as in need of repairs. The bridge is the largest bridge in which Centre County is directly interested. It has a drive-way 18 feet wide. The bridge is 226 feet long.

While chopping wood several days ago, Herbie Auman, foreman at the "Keystone Gazette" office, met with an accident that might have resulted more seriously than was the case. His axe caught on a clothes line and glanced off onto his head, inflicting an ugly wound. Herbie is wearing a bandage, but sooner or later he'll be wearing diamonds.

We are informed that the First National Nurseries, of Rochester, N. The new catalog of the Lock Haven State Normal School is one of the handsomest issued by any secondary school in this state. It contains a great deal of valuable information concerning this splendid Normal school. We note that its faculty is made up of graduates of our leading colleges and universities and has a specially trained expert at the head of its fine Training School and this means much for prospective teachers. It has a fine Gymnasium and Athletic Field, and the school aims to develop its students not only educationally, but morally and physically. Write for its catalog.

To paraphrase the famous telegram of Finnegan, the railroad supervisor, it was "down again, up again, Sebring." The auto garage sign was mysteriously cut down early one morning last week, the iron pipe support being cut off a few inches from the ground. Dr. Sebring at once put up the sign, this time reinforcing the pipe support with a thick iron bar. As a press agent to boost his own game Dr. Sebring has all the old hands skinned a block. By the time the courts are through with the sign his garage will have had more free advertising than could have been purchased with John D.'s unlimited bank account. We would suggest that he also do a little advertising in the other columns of the newspapers.

Graduation exercises for the teachers class in training will be held on Tuesday evening, August 1, in the Bellefonte United Brethren church. The class comprises nine members who have completed one year's training in Sunday school work and a sermon appropriate to the occasion will be preached by Rev. S. H. Engler, superintendent of teachers' training in Centre County. The year's training in Sunday school work is divided into five branches, as follows: Old Testament, New Testament, the Sunday School, the Teacher and the Pupil. The nine members of the class this year are William Shope, William Sager, Ida Klinger, Margaret Letterman, Elizabeth Fisher, Mrs. James Rote, Mrs. Sarah Harman, Mrs. Richard Barlett and Mrs. C. W. Winey.

Union services will be held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning, next, at 10.45 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt, pastor of the Reformed church, will officiate, the Presbyterians and the Reformed congregations uniting in the service. Announcement will be made of a call for a congregational meeting of the Presbyterians, on Sunday morning, August 6, to vote on the question of whether or not they are ready to proceed with the election of a pastor. It is the prevailing belief that a pastor will be chosen from among the several ministers who have preached trial sermons here during the last few months. On last Sunday the Presbyterian pulpit was occupied by Rev. Winfield Scott Nevin, of Philadelphia, who is one of several applicants for the appointment.

Mrs. John Blanchard gave a tea yesterday at her home on West Linn Street.

Mrs. John VanPelt, of Spangler, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Rachel Harris.

Miss Minnie Cherry is visiting in Tyrone this week as the guest of Miss Margaret Dobson.

Mrs. Thomas Ross, of Pittsburg, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Charles A. Morris, on West Linn Street.

Mrs. Katherine Burnet, of Syracuse, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Shugert, on East Linn Street.

Washington North and his daughter, Miss Mary North, of Mifflin, are guests of the former's sister, Mrs. F. W. Crider.

The ladies of the Bellefonte United Brethren church will hold a festival on the Gamble & Gheen lawn on Saturday evening, next.

Mrs. John G. Love and son, John, who have been visiting with the Misses Love, at Nealmont, near Tyrone, returned home on Tuesday.

Frank H. Clemson came down from Stormstown in his automobile on Monday, several business engagements requiring his presence here.

George Sunday, the tailor, several days ago purchased a Ford automobile and is devoting these pleasant days to learning to boss the machine.

J. Mac. Curtin, one of the trustworthy corps of the Westinghouse Company, at Pittsburg, is enjoying his annual vacation, dividing his time between Bellefonte and the old homestead, at Curtin.

Numerous and pressing business engagements made it impossible for Captain H. S. Taylor to accompany Company L to camp, at Selinsgrove, last Friday The boys are expected to arrive home on Saturday evening.

Miss Katie Murry, who has been spending the last year in Philadelphia, is visiting with her father, James Murry, in Bellefonte, planning to remain here for the next two months.

Mrs. Boyd Musser, of Altoona, is visiting at the J. W. Musser home, in Bellefonte. She recently returned from an eight weeks trip to Ireland, where she enjoyed a most delightful visit with her father and brothers.

Mrs. George W. Etter, of Philadelphia, is a guest at the Thomas Donachy home, on East Bishop street. Some time ago Mrs. Etter was quite ill in the Germantown hospital, but she has apparently fully recovered and is again enjoying splendid health.

Nevin Wetzel who some time ago went to Tennessee with Billy McFarland to work on an electrical job, is home and will remain for some time. Billy McFarland is now working in Illinois, having charge of an electrical plant in one of the towns in that State.

Rev. J. F. Hower and family left on Monday morning for Central Oak Heights, near Milton, where they will occupy their cottage during the annual Bible conference and camp-meeting. The Bellefonte Evangelical church will not be closed this year on the Lord's Day, as Mr. Hower will be home to fill his pulpit each Sunday.

Samuel Osman, whose home is on Thomas Street and who is one of the crew on the Lewisburg freight, met with a painful accident on Saturday afternoon of last week. While jumping upon a car he twisted an ankle, badly tearing two ligaments. The accident will probably keep him laid up for several weeks.

The wedding of Miss Edith E. Budinger, of Snow Shoe, and Mr. J. Ellis Harvey, of Orviston, will be solemnized this evening, at 6 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Budinger, at Snow Shoe. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Frank Ruch, pastor of the Snow Shoe Methodist Episcopal church. The bride will be attended by her sister, Miss Blanche Budinger. The groom's attendant will be Dr. Hal. Harvey, of Atlantic City.

Charley Smith, one of the efficient staff at Gamble & Gheen's flouring mill, several days ago met with a painful accident, and the wonder of it is that he escaped having one hand crushed. He was feeding wheat into the rollers and in an unguarded moment got one of his hands too close to the rolls. Two fingers on his left hand were pinched and the nails torn off. With rare presence of mind he quickly jerked his hand out of danger and thus avoided what would otherwise have been a very serious accident.

James Lane gave his old Bellefonte friends a pleasant surprise last week by dropping in upon them unexpectedly and remaining for several days with his parents, Mr. and Mr. John N. Lane. Jim. is located near Youngstown, Ohio, being engaged in the coal and coke business with his father-in law. With the exception of a few minutes spent here between trains about seven years ago, this was his first visit home in twelve years. According to Jim's robust appearance, Ohio must be a pretty good State in which to live.

At the last commencement of the Lock Haven State Normal School a large class graduated and it is interesting to note that the graduates of this high grade Normal School have no difficulty in securing positions as teachers. Several young men were elected to positions as teachers with salaries ranging from eighty to ninety dollars a month. Thirty-two of the graduating class had experience as teachers and they now have lucrative positions for next year. Many improvements are being made during the summer so that when the school opens on September 11th, everything will be in first class shape for the large school that is sure to enroll.

A. S. Garman and his bride were among those who came down from Tyrone on Saturday on the occasion of the Pennsylvania Railroad shopmen's picnic at Hecla Park. Al. is tremendously interested in the Tyrone band, which is quite natural for he trumps up more public spirit than is to be found in the average resident of any community. Al. is more than ordinarily fond of band music. When the writer was scooting about town in knee breeches, Al. tooted one of the biggest horns in the old Bellefonte band. In those days the band practice meetings were held in the arbitration room of the old Court House and it had to be something all-fired important to keep Al. away from a single meeting.

COMPANY L. IN CAMP.

bury and numerous other towns in nearby counties.

On Monday morning every man was up at 5 o'clock and ready for breakfast, after which we were ordered out on another hike, which ended in a sham battle about five miles from camp. Company L was the first company in the first line, having a good position on the brow of a high hill, and we, of course, succeeded in winning the battle for the battalion. It was 11.30 when we returned to camp, everybody pretty tired and ready for the good dinner which had been prepared. At 1.30 P. M. we were again ordered out for battalion drill, getting back to quarters about 3 o'clock. This gave the boys an opportunity to strike off for a swim in the river. Not all, however, for our efficient officers, Lieutenants E. R. Taylor and William H. Brown, were immediately ordered out for another tactical walk and did not return until 5 o'clock, by which time orders were waiting to have the company on the review field at 5.30 for dress parade. Dress parade, it might be explained for the information of those who have not been to a military camp, means that every man must have on his dress uniform and white gloves, his face must be cleanly shaved and his shoes brightly polished.

The story of one day in camp is that of pretty nearly every day—hard work and then some, although no end of fun and enjoyment to break the monotony and keep the boys in good humor. The weather has been delightful. Our camp is located in a beautiful valley and everybody seems well pleased with the selection of the grounds. Any word from camp would be incomplete without some reference to the regret felt by all the boys that our captain, H. S. Taylor, could not possibly arrange to be with us. We all hoped to the last that he would be able to arrange his business engagements to enable him to bring the company to camp, but since he could not accomplish that all the boys are trying to make a good showing, not only for themselves but for Captain Taylor.

CAMP NOTES.

Prothonotary Arthur B. Kimport was a guest at dinner on Monday. He was accompanied by his interesting children: Teresine, Ellen S., Margaret, Nellie and Adam F.

Company L leads the regiment, and a great many who are experienced in military matters and able to appreciate the fine appearance made by the boys, have complimented them on their showing on the field.

Corporal Alfred F. Smith, of Snow Shoe, was unable to leave home with the company on Friday. He arrived in camp on Monday evening.

Say, that James Matthews is a busy man these days. No more operations for Jim. Not on your life.

Visitors entertained by the company have included W. H. Heacock, Col. William E. Nott, Ex-Sergeant of old Company B Charles Newcomer, of Sunbury; Ex-Sergeant Samuel Meyer, of Lewistown.

Sergeant Claude W. Smith on Sunday entertained these visitors at supper; Miss Rose Haupt, of Milesburg; Miss Morgan and Mrs. Leitzel, of Northumberland.

Visitors in camp on Sunday and entertained by Sergeant Gladstone Taylor were: Miss Stevens, Mrs. Bloom and the Misses Kerchner, of Sunbury; Frank Miles, of Milton, and W. F. Leitzel and J. F. Swenson, of State College.

The presence of Sheriff Hurley and Deputy Sheriff Rees was necessary to quiet a family row near Coleville a few nights ago. Claiming that his wife had refused to accompany him home, Austin Watson took his child from the home of his wife's father, Ira Rossman, and carried it to his own home. Mrs. Watson, alleging that her husband had attacked her, telephoned for Sheriff Hurley and the latter, with Deputy Sheriff Rees, drove to the Watson home. They found the child safely in bed and Watson in the cellar. The child was restored to its mother and Watson was locked up in jail.

The Tyrone band concert on the Court House diamond, on Saturday evening, last, attracted quite a crowd of persons, not only from Bellefonte but from surrounding towns. This being its first appearance in Bellefonte there was no little curiosity to hear the aggregation of musicians assembled by the Pennsylvania Railroad at Tyrone. The members of the band are clean-cut, fine looking and made a good showing in their natty blue uniforms. William T. Royer, a former Bellefonter, is a member of the band and participated in the concert. There is some talk of having the band play at the business men's picnic at Hecla Park this year.
